Security Analysis Report: Hong Kong (November 01 - November 08, 2026)

Executive Summary

The period from November 01 to November 08, 2026, saw a continuation of Hong Kong's tightened security posture, primarily driven by the ongoing enforcement of national security legislation and heightened cybersecurity concerns. A significant development was the sentencing of prominent activist Joshua Wong to 10 years in prison for "conspiracy to collude with foreign forces," drawing strong condemnation from a coalition of ten Western nations and a firm rebuttal from Beijing and Hong Kong authorities. Concurrently, Hong Kong concluded a major cybersecurity drill aimed at enhancing resilience against cyber threats, amidst reports of a 15% increase in cybersecurity incidents in Q3 2026 and widening data breaches affecting educational institutions. Diplomatically, the city's justice minister emphasized the need to build a "reassuring" environment despite anticipated Western criticism, while the US partially restored Hong Kong's special legal status earlier in the year, though its special trading status remains revoked. These events underscore Hong Kong's complex security landscape, characterized by internal political control, evolving cyber threats, and persistent international scrutiny.

Key Security Developments

- National Security Law Enforcement and High-Profile Convictions

On November 5, 2026, prominent pro-democracy activist Joshua Wong Chi-fung was sentenced to 10 years in prison by the High Court for "conspiracy to collude with foreign forces" under Hong Kong's National Security Law. This marks his second conviction under the controversial legislation, extending his incarceration until 2036. The sentencing immediately triggered a joint statement of condemnation from ten Western countries, including the US, UK, and Australia, who called for an end to "unjust prosecutions". Hong Kong's Secretary for Security, Tang Ping-keung, and China's Foreign Ministry spokesperson, Guo Jiakun, swiftly denounced these criticisms as "malicious attacks" and interference in internal affairs, asserting that Wong's trial was fair and upheld the rule of law.

- Arrest for Seditious Publication

On November 5, 2026, the Hong Kong Police National Security Department arrested a 34-year-old local man in Mong Kok. The individual, identified as a company director, was suspected of "importing a publication that has a seditious intention," contravening Section 24 of the Safeguarding National Security Ordinance. Police condemned the act, emphasizing the seriousness of the offense which carries a maximum penalty of seven years imprisonment upon conviction.

- Cybersecurity Attack and Defence Drill Concludes

The Hong Kong Cybersecurity Attack and Defence Drill 2026, spearheaded by the Digital Policy Office (DPO) and co-organized by multiple government and private entities, successfully concluded on November 1, 2026, after commencing on October 29. The three-day, 60-hour drill involved 51 defending teams from 28 government departments, 23 public organizations, and private enterprises, facing simulated cyberattacks from 23 "Red Teams" comprising cybersecurity professionals from Hong Kong and mainland China. The exercise aimed to identify system vulnerabilities, test defense mechanisms, and enhance overall cybersecurity protection and resilience.

- Increase in Cybersecurity Incidents and Data Breaches

The Hong Kong Computer Emergency Response Team Coordination Centre (HKCERT) reported a 15% increase in cybersecurity incidents in Q3 2026 compared to the same period in 2025, with phishing remaining the dominant threat, accounting for approximately 61% of all incidents. Furthermore, on November 5, 2026, two additional educational institutions, City University of Hong Kong and Hong Kong Art School, reported data breaches linked to a cyberattack on the Canvas learning platform, bringing the total number of affected local organizations to seven. The breach at City University alone potentially compromised personal information for approximately 28,000 students.

- Diplomatic Repercussions of National Security Law

Following the sentencing of Joshua Wong, a joint statement issued on November 6, 2026, by ten countries, including the US, UK, Canada, Australia, and Japan, criticized Hong Kong's national security law as a tool of political repression. Hong Kong's Justice Secretary Paul Lam, speaking on November 8, 2026, acknowledged the inevitability of continued Western criticism but stressed the government's focus on "practical work" to build a safe and reassuring environment for the international community. This diplomatic friction highlights the persistent international concern over the erosion of freedoms in Hong Kong under the national security framework.

- Hong Kong's Economic Reorientation Amid Geopolitical Tensions

On November 3, 2026, Chief Executive John Lee Ka-chiu addressed the Global Financial Leaders' Investment Summit, announcing that Hong Kong is "rethinking its playbook" to adapt to intensifying geopolitical tensions and the rapid advancement of artificial intelligence (AI). The city is strategically pivoting towards commodity trading, fintech, and green finance, with Lee pledging to provide stability for investors through its first five-year plan. This strategic shift aims to reinforce Hong Kong's economic resilience amidst a challenging global environment.

- US-China Trade Discussions and Hong Kong's Status

On November 6, 2026, US and China trade chiefs held a call ahead of an anticipated summit between Presidents Trump and Xi, with the US pressing China on commitments regarding rare earths and agricultural purchases. This follows a partial restoration of Hong Kong's special legal status by the US in July 2026, a move welcomed by China. However, the US State Department clarified that the revocation of Hong Kong's special trading status, initially imposed in 2020, remains in effect. This nuanced approach reflects the broader complexities of US-China relations and their direct impact on Hong Kong's international standing.

- China's Global Initiatives and Hong Kong's Role

On November 1, 2026, Cui Jianchun, Commissioner of the Ministry of Foreign Affairs of the PRC in the HKSAR, published an opinion piece highlighting China's global initiatives, including the International Organisation for Mediation and frameworks for Global AI Governance and Data Security. He asserted that Hong Kong is uniquely positioned as a strategic launch pad for realizing these initiatives, underscoring Beijing's vision for Hong Kong's role in its broader international strategy.

Geopolitical Impact and Regional Dynamics

Hong Kong's security developments during this period continue to reflect its evolving position within China's national security framework and the broader geopolitical competition between Beijing and Western powers. The sentencing of Joshua Wong and the subsequent international outcry underscore the persistent tension between Hong Kong's commitment to national security and international concerns over human rights and autonomy. This dynamic solidifies the perception among Western nations that Hong Kong's "one country, two systems" principle is being systematically eroded, leading to continued diplomatic pressure and criticism. Such actions, while condemned by Beijing as interference, contribute to a narrative that impacts Hong Kong's image as an international financial hub governed by the rule of law.

The US's partial restoration of Hong Kong's special legal status in July 2026, while maintaining the revocation of its special trading status, illustrates a calibrated approach to its engagement with Hong Kong, balancing economic interests with human rights concerns. This complex stance reflects the broader US-China relationship, where trade and strategic competition coexist with areas of potential cooperation. Similarly, the EU's ongoing discussions about Hong Kong and its expressed concerns over the National Security Law indicate a sustained focus from Europe, even as talks for a new financial services dialogue in November 2026 suggest a desire to maintain economic ties.

Regionally, Hong Kong's stability is intrinsically linked to China's overall strategic landscape. Beijing views Hong Kong as a critical component of its national rejuvenation strategy, with efforts to integrate the city into mainland development plans, such as the Greater Bay Area, continuing. The emphasis on cybersecurity, as demonstrated by the large-scale drill, also reflects China's broader national security priorities, extending to critical infrastructure and data protection within Hong Kong. The city's economic reorientation towards fintech, green finance, and commodity trading, as articulated by Chief Executive John Lee, is a direct response to global shifts and an attempt to solidify its economic relevance within China's strategic vision.

Military and Defense Analysis

Hong Kong's defense is primarily the responsibility of the Chinese People's Liberation Army (PLA) Hong Kong Garrison. While no specific military activities or exercises within Hong Kong were reported during November 1-8, 2026, the period falls within the context of the PLA Hong Kong Garrison's annual training cycle, which commenced on January 4, 2026, to enhance combat capabilities and defense responsibilities. Earlier in July 2026, PLA Navy ships, including the guided-missile destroyer Nanning and frigate Hengyang, conducted a five-day visit to Hong Kong, which included open-house events for residents, showcasing China's defense technology and military modernization. This visit, along with the 29th rotation of PLA formed units in August 2026, underscores the routine presence and operational readiness of the garrison.

The PLA's activities in Hong Kong serve a dual purpose: to maintain security and stability within the Special Administrative Region and to project China's military strength and sovereignty. While Hong Kong does not have its own independent military, the presence and exercises of the PLA Garrison are a key component of its defense posture. Modernization programs and defense spending trends are determined by Beijing, with the garrison's capabilities integrated into the broader PLA structure. The focus remains on internal security, counter-terrorism, and maintaining order, particularly in the context of the National Security Law. The upcoming hosting of the 94th Interpol General Assembly in November 2026 further highlights Hong Kong's role in international security cooperation, albeit under the overarching framework of Chinese sovereignty.

Outlook and Forecast

Short-term trends (1-3 months): In the immediate future, Hong Kong is likely to experience continued enforcement of national security legislation, with further arrests and prosecutions anticipated for activities deemed to endanger national security. The diplomatic friction with Western nations over these issues is expected to persist, characterized by condemnations from international bodies and counter-statements from Hong Kong and Beijing. Cybersecurity will remain a critical area of focus, with the recent drill and increased incident reports indicating a proactive, yet challenging, environment. The Hong Kong FinTech Week x StartmeupHK Festival (November 2–6, 2026) was identified as a high-risk period for cyberattacks, suggesting that vigilance will remain high in the aftermath. Economically, Hong Kong will continue its pivot towards new sectors like fintech and green finance, seeking to attract investment despite geopolitical headwinds.

Critical flashpoints and risk areas: The primary flashpoint remains the application of the National Security Law and the Safeguarding National Security Ordinance, particularly concerning freedom of expression, assembly, and association. High-profile cases and arrests will continue to draw international attention and criticism, potentially leading to further diplomatic tensions or targeted sanctions against officials. Cybersecurity threats, especially phishing, AI-assisted attacks, and data breaches affecting critical infrastructure and educational institutions, pose a significant risk to Hong Kong's digital economy and public trust. While no immediate military flashpoints are apparent, any significant internal unrest or perceived external interference could trigger a more visible response from the PLA Garrison.

Indicators to monitor: Key indicators to monitor include the frequency and nature of arrests under national security laws, particularly those involving foreign elements or international advocacy. The rhetoric from Hong Kong and Beijing authorities regarding "external interference" will be important. In cybersecurity, tracking HKCERT's incident reports, the success of new defense initiatives, and the impact of major cyber events on critical sectors will be crucial. On the diplomatic front, observe statements from the US, EU, and other Western powers, as well as any changes in trade or economic policies affecting Hong Kong. The success of Hong Kong's economic reorientation and its ability to attract international investment will also be a key indicator of its overall stability and resilience.

Strategic recommendations: For international businesses and organizations operating in Hong Kong, it is recommended to conduct thorough due diligence on legal and regulatory compliance, particularly concerning data security and national security provisions. Strengthening cybersecurity defenses and incident response capabilities is paramount given the elevated threat landscape. Diplomatic entities should maintain open channels of communication while consistently advocating for human rights and the rule of law, seeking to balance engagement with principled stands. For Hong Kong itself, fostering greater transparency in legal proceedings and addressing international concerns about judicial independence could help mitigate diplomatic fallout and rebuild trust. Continued investment in advanced cybersecurity infrastructure and talent development is essential to protect its digital economy.

• Govt to boost high-value tourism and Mice (2026-11-08 05:17)

Financial Secretary Paul Chan on Sunday said the government would continue to support the growth of high-value tourism alongside the Meetings, Incentives, Conferences, and Exhibitions (Mice) industry. Writing in his weekly blog, Chan noted that Hong Kong had been buzzing with major events over the past week, including financial summits and international exhibitions. He highlighted the three-day inaugural "Festival of Connoisseurs", which showcased an array of luxury goods such as supercars, yachts and jewellery, noting that it drew over 3,000 visitors from around the world. Citing industry research, Chan said visitors attending international exhibitions spend an average of HK$9,300 per person, which is 70 percent higher than a typical overnight tourist. The research, he said, also estimated that the exhibition industry contributed over HK$50 billion to Hong Kong's economy in 2024 and created around 67,000 full-time jobs.

Chan said the government would continue to vigorously promote mega events across differentfields and improve supporting facilities. The Tourism Board, he added, would also continue towork with the industry to tailor more unique experiences and services for high-value visitors.Looking ahead, Chan noted that Hong Kong's capacity for large-scale Mice events would expandby more than 40 percent upon the completion of Phase 2 of AsiaWorld-Expo and the Wan ChaiNorth redevelopment project. - DOJ eyes closer ties with legal sector for global push (2026-11-08 03:57)

Secretary for Justice Paul Lam on Sunday said the government hoped to work closely with the legal sector to help practitioners better navigate the changing international environment and strengthen external exchanges. Speaking on a Commercial Radio programme, Lam stressed that collaboration was a central theme of this year’s Legal Week, which concluded on Friday, demonstrating the government's drive to take the initiative. "The Department of Justice often plays a leading role. We hope that more of our local friends from the legal sector will participate, understand the latest environment, and make new connections — whether from the mainland or overseas. Internally, we must collaborate, but more importantly, we need to collaborate with partners outside Hong Kong," he said. For Hong Kong to truly live up to its reputation as an international legal centre, the justice secretary stressed the SAR needs to strengthen relationships with external legal institutions and engage in more direct communication. Describing it as “symbolic”, Lam noted that the International Institute for the Unification of Private Law held its centenary celebration in Hong Kong during Legal Week while concurrently hosting the opening ceremony for its Asia-Pacific Liaison Office. He stressed that Hong Kong secured the institution's first office outside its seat in Rome in its 100-year history with the country's support. He added that Hong Kong played an important role in helping the nation promote a fairer, and rules-based international order. Edited by Tony Sabine

- Substandard columns found at MTR site in Tung Chung (2026-11-08 00:35)

The Buildings Department on Saturday said it had found dozens of substandard columns at the MTR station that is currently under construction in Tung Chung West. Around 30 such columns were identified by the registered structural engineers (RSE) working on the project. The department asked that the RSE submit an investigation report and propose remedial measures by the middle of this month. The department will review these submissions, continue to monitor the situation closely, and oversee the necessary corrective works to ensure that all construction meets the relevant safety and quality standards. In response to media questions, the department indicated that it had identified the issues during a routine site inspection and quality audit on the 27th of last month. Upon confirming that two concrete columns were substandard, the department said it immediately instructed the RSE team and the Registered Contractor to conduct a comprehensive investigation and carry out corrective works as soon as possible. The MTR Corporation has since ordered a suspension of relevant construction activities. As part of standard procedures, the RSE’s supervision team carried out further inspections following the progressive removal of the concrete work, uncovering similar defects in additional concrete columns; these findings were reported to the department last Tuesday.The department further stated that, as the temporary supports for the floor slab had not yetbeen removed, the identified concrete defects posed no risk to the structural integrity of thestation. These temporary supports may only be removed once a team of registered structuralengineers was satisfied with the relevant works. The department said all such procedures werecarried out in accordance with the approved plans while its staff had conducted routineinspections of the site. A preliminary review by the department revealed no evidence ofintentional deviation from the approved plans, nor had it found any instances where thefollow-up actions taken by the personnel in charge violated relevant codes or regulations.Edited by Tony Sabine

- Health gear firms set to be not left to own devices (2026-11-07 11:07)

The Health Bureau said it is striving to introduce a medical devices bill next year to replace the current voluntary administrative regulatory regime. In a paper submitted to the Legislative Council, it said a dual-track regulatory model covering both pre-market and post-market risk management would be adopted for medical devices. This includes the implementation of a registration system and a licensing system for traders to ensure that medical devices supplied in Hong Kong meet safety and quality standards. The paper states that the proposed registration system would primarily involve classifying different types of medical devices by risk levels. Some general devices and in-vitro diagnostic medical devices must be registered with the Department of Health before they can be launched on the Hong Kong market. These include hypodermic needles, vision-correction contact lenses, urine test strips and self-test blood glucose reagents. Local manufacturers, importers and wholesalers of medical devices must obtain the relevant licences before supplying the products in Hong Kong. The new mechanism will also require traders to report medical device-related incidents, such as incidents that pose a public health threat or may lead to death or a serious deterioration in health, and to take remedial measures that meet the department’s requirements. The authorities stressed that the aim is to enhance regulatory oversight and mitigate the consequences of such incidents. The legislative proposals will be discussed in a health services panel meeting on Friday. Edited by Azam Khan

- France's Gehri, Russia's Isakova win HK triathlon leg (2026-11-07 10:22)

France’s Nils Serre Gehri produced a dramatic late surge to win the men’s individual title at the World Triathlon Cup Hong Kong on Saturday, while Russia’s Diana Isakova continued her strong run of form by claiming the women’s race. Gehri, who won the U23 title in Pontevedra, Spain, in September, clocked 50 minutes and 14 seconds. He overtook Australia's CallumMcClusky right at the finish line to seal the victory, with Spain's David Castro Fajardo roundingout the podium in third. Hong Kong, China's Nicholas Tsang finished 58th in 54 minutes and44 seconds. In the women's race, Isakova arrived in Hong Kong fresh from a World Cup win inRome and made it back-to-back victories, finishing in 55 minutes and 39 seconds.Luxembourg's Jeanne Lehair took second, followed by Huang Anqi of the national team. HildaChoi was the top finisher among Hong Kong triathletes in 37th place, with Cade Wright 39th andBailee Brown 50th. The roughly 24-kilometre course began along the Central and Wan Chaiwaterfront, with athletes opening with a 750-metre swim in Victoria Harbour. They then tackledan 18.5-kilometre bike leg past Expo Drive, the International Finance Centre and the CentralPiers before closing with a five-kilometre run to the finish line on Lung Wo Road. - Three arrested over HK$4m craft beer scam (2026-11-07 10:06)

Two men and a woman have been arrested on suspicion of conspiracy to defraud in connection with an alleged scheme that induced people to invest in craft beer machines. The suspects, aged between 46 and 54, were said to have held the roles of company director, office person-in-charge and investor recruiter, police said. An investigation found that the alleged criminal syndicate began operating last November by luring people into investing in craft beer machines on the promise of high returns. The syndicate are alleged to have claimed that the machines would be rented out on the mainland and that the annual return rate would reach 60 percent, according to police. Officers said the syndicate held investment seminars and took prospective investors to its office to sample beer. It would initially pay returns to investors but later stopped. Police said the syndicate had no operations in Hong Kong and that some of the invested funds were found to have been transferred to personal accounts. So far, police have contacted six victims whose losses amounted to more than HK$4 million. Edited by Azam Khan

- Govt rebuts ten-nation statement on Wong case (2026-11-07 09:49)

The government on Saturday expressed strong dissatisfaction with and firm opposition to a joint statement by ten countries on the sentencing of Joshua Wong for conspiracy to commit collusion, saying it distorted facts and smeared the SAR. A government spokesman said the statement by the United States, the United Kingdom, France, Germany, Japan, Italy, Australia, Canada, the Netherlands and New Zealand disregarded facts, interfered with the SAR's independent judicial power, and urged the countries to stop interfering in Hong Kong matters, which are purely China's internal affairs. Wong pleaded guilty to conspiracy to collude with foreign countries or external elements to endanger national security, and the court sentenced him independently on the evidence, the spokesperson said. "Attempting to distort criminal judgments handed down in accordance with the law into actions targeting 'political expression' or 'political participation' is purely political manipulation deliberately intended to confuse the public and distort right and wrong," the spokesman said. "Hong Kong is a society underpinned by the rule of law. The HKSAR Government has been consistently fulfilling its constitutional duty to safeguard national security in accordance with the law, upholding the principles that lawsmust be observed and strictly enforced to bring offenders to account." Edited by Altis Wong

• Proxy votes loom large in building management law fix (2026-11-07 08:29)

Secretary for Home and Youth Affairs Alice Mak said Hong Kong would strengthen provisions for proxy-vote checks and continue to study a cap on such votes following the end of a second round of consultations on Building-Management Ordinance amendments. The public consultation, she said on Saturday, drew 500 responses, with more than half expressing reservations about a proposed cap on proxy votes. "If we set a cap of 20, then when proxy votes are submitted to an owners' corporation and it receives 22, how can it determine which is the 21st or 22nd? How should the verification be carried out at submission?" Mak said. "Should it be counted by the time of its submission to the management office or by the time the person signed the proxy form? So there are some practical difficulties, and we understand this." Mak said the government would continue to study the cap and related issues, including who could be appointed as a proxy, and would explore electronic proxy appointments as a way to overcome operational difficulties. "For the whole proxy-vote system, we must ensure, in the direction of our amendments, the system is not abused and that proxy votes cannot be forged," she said. "We need to make sure the proxy appointment is genuine and that the operation is workable on the ground level. It has to operate practically without difficulties to avoid potential disputes." Mak went on to say that a paper had already been submitted to the Legislative Council, and that the matter would be discussed next week. Edited by Azam Khan

• Lawmakers call for cancel culture to hit bid-riggers (2026-11-07 08:23)

Lawmakers on Saturday voiced hope that a newly established joint task force can change the culture of the building maintenance and renovation industry by actively weeding out bad apples. They were speaking following an announcement on Friday that 28 people had been arrested in an operation against a suspected triad-linked bid-rigging syndicate in the sector. It was the first operation by a joint task force – made up of police, the ICAC and the Competition Commission – that was set up following the release of the report by an independent committee probing last November's deadly fire at Wang Fuk Court in Tai Po. Speaking on a radio programme, DAB lawmaker Chan Hok-fung said the new joint task force should not be targeting bid-rigging on a case-by-case basis. "I think it's only at the source that the problem can truly be solved," he said. "If the government doesn't get involved, doesn't intervene heavily and doesn't reverse this distorted way the market operates, the problem can't be solved." Lam Chun-sing, who chairs the Federation of Hong Kong and Kowloon Labour Unions, called for firms convicted of bribery or competition offences to be struck off contractors' lists. "What some contractors fear most isn't a fine – it's not being allowed to take on work in the future," he said. Edited by Azam Khan

• John Lee calls on youth to be curious and courageous (2026-11-07 07:25)

Chief Executive John Lee on Saturday urged young people to be curious and courageous as Hong Kong hosts the third Youth Development Summit. In a video speech for the summit, themed "Pioneering New Horizons, Venturing into the Future", in Wan Chai, he said that when young people are empowered, communities are strengthened and the world moves forward. Under the the territory's first five-year plan, Lee said, Hong Kong will enhance youth development opportunities, nurturing a new generation to cultivate affection for the country and Hong Kong, a global perspective, and an ambitious and positive mindset. "We are expanding international exposure through exchanges, internships, and learning experiences," he said. "Working with our schools, businesses and community partners, we are cultivating an environment where young people can unleash their potential, thrive and shine on the global stage." For his part, Chief Secretary Eric Chan said he was confident government measures would help Hong Kong's young people serve the needs of the economy, the community and the country. "That includes participating in the development of the Guangdong-Hong Kong-Macao Greater Bay Area, as well as the Belt and Road Initiative," he said. "We will continue to deepen patriotic education for young people while helping them broaden their international horizons." Edited by Azam Khan

- US enterprises 'surprise' in latest HK strategic batch (2026-11-07 05:08)

The United States is the largest source of overseas firms in Hong Kong’s latest batch of companies welcomed by the Office for Attracting Strategic Enterprises (Oases). Last month, Oases welcomed 18 enterprise partners in its seventh batch, bringing the cumulative number of strategic enterprises attracted to Hong Kong to 142. "In terms of overseas enterprises, you may be a bit surprised, but the United States has the largest number; of course there is also Europe," said Oases director-general Peter Yan on an RTHK radio programme on Saturday. "This time I am also very happy that for the first time we have a Korean enterprise coming to Hong Kong and also a Japanese enterprise coming to Hong Kong as strategic enterprises." On the mainland side, Yan said the enterprises came from various cities such as Beijing, Shanghai and Shenzhen. " This time we also explored more other cities that are quite outstanding, especially in advanced manufacturing and new energy; we are also attracting them," he said. "In medical technology, other cities are also developing quite well – for example, Hangzhou in AI, and Nanjing and Suzhou." Yan said artificial intelligence and life and health technology are two relatively large sectors represented in the batch, with each accounting for about 30 percent of the total, while fintech and new energy each accounted for more than 10 percent. The 142 strategic enterprises that have settled in Hong Kong, he enumerated, have committed to a total investment of HK$84 billion and will create about 26,700 high-end jobs. His office has been monitoring and following up on the companies’ development, and both capital investment and job creation have now exceeded their targets. Looking at the first six batches of strategic enterprises, Yan said capital investment has exceeded pledged figures by about 30 percent. He added that Oases carefully selects strategic enterprises, gaining an in-depth understanding of about 20 to 30 percent of the companies it contacts and helping them draw up development plans for Hong Kong. Typically, the office contacts companies several months before they settle in the city and follows up for more than a year, discussing their first concrete landing project and matching them withpolicies or stakeholders such as universities, investors and the business sector to help ensure atangible industrial contribution. Edited by Robert Kemp

- Colder weather 'may worsen flu risks for children' (2026-11-07 05:01)

A paediatric infectious diseases expert warned on Saturday that colder weather could prolong the current flu season and lead to more critical cases in children. Mike Kwan, president of the Asian Society for Paediatric Infectious Diseases, said that if infection numbers stay high, critical cases will rise in tandem. "Since the weather is going to get more cold, and also we are going into the winter season, I really worry that the current flu season will merge with the winter flu season," he said. "So then you experience a very, very long period of the flu infection. And subsequently... [I am] really worried that there will be more paediatric critical cases or even mortality." Kwan urged parents whose children had yet to receive this season's influenza vaccine to get them vaccinated as soon as possible. Edited by Robert Kemp

- 28 nabbed in first task force raid against bid-rigging (2026-11-06 11:18)

Authorities said on Friday that 28 people were arrested in an operation against a suspected triad-linked bid-rigging syndicate targeting building maintenance and renovation projects. Secretary for Security Chris Tang said it was the first operation by the joint task force made up of police, the ICAC and the Competition Commission, which was set up after the Wang Fuk Court fire last year. Tang said the syndicate was looking to cash in before the government's anti-bid-rigging policies takes effect. Under pretexts such as fluctuating material prices and the urgent need to start works, it tried to get homeowners to sign contracts quickly, so its preferred engineering consultants and contractors would be selected in a bid to rake in huge profits at the last minute, he said. "The syndicate involved at least 20 buildings or estates, including 12 that have already awarded the contract and eight that have yet to award the contract," the security minister told reporters. "The awarded sum is about HK$100 million and the to-be-awarded amount is also about HK$100 million." Officials will contact the owners' corporations of the affected estates to offer assistance. Those arrested include directors and staff from a propertymanagement company, six contractors and 10 consultancy firms, along with one member of anowners' corporation. Several arrestees, Tang said, were suspected to have triad affiliations. Theywere arrested for offences including deception, forgery, conspiracy to defraud and conspiracyto offer an advantage to an agent, among others. Separately, police smashed seven illegalpremises suspected to be controlled by triads across the city and arrested 38 people. Tang saidthe syndicate allegedly funnelled profits from bid-rigging to illegal gambling dens and viceestablishments. He added a 24-hour hotline and a reward scheme have been set up toencourage the public to report suspected bid-rigging, with all information kept strictlyconfidential. Edited by Edmond Fong

- 'Unlimited land searches raise privacy concerns' (2026-11-06 09:07)

A development official on Friday said a lack of restrictions for land record searches may lead to privacy concerns, prompting the authorities to adjust the mechanism. Her remarks came after the government proposed legislative amendments, saying land record searches must meet one of nine specified purposes. Speaking to lawmakers, Permanent Secretary for Development of Planning and Lands Doris Ho said there should be room for the media to carry out investigative reporting by allowing the search in the public interest, including the reporting of large-scale unauthorised building works. “We believe that there should be a mechanism – a not too difficult one – for the media to carry out reporting that serves public interest,” she said. “We want to have this type of reporting. Therefore, although an application and some information will be required in the future… we believe the chance of approval is very high.” Ho added that although there is no appeal mechanism, if an application is rejected, the applicant could submit grounds that were not previously provided for authorities to reconsider. Authorities are also looking at the introduction of a mechanism to inform home owners whose properties are being searched, she said. Edited by Aaron Tam

- Record 400-plus HK firms join Shanghai import expo (2026-11-06 08:04)

A record high of more than 400 Hong Kong businesses are taking part in the China International Import Expo in Shanghai hoping to use the event as a launchpad for entry into the mainland market. Among the first-time exhibitors is a Hong Kong accounting firm, which has seen a 30-percent surge over the past year in mainland clients seeking to expand overseas. Man Law, CEO of the firm's greater China division, told RTHK that venturing abroad was no longer just a trend, but a practical necessity for managing risks and driving growth. The expo, he said, is an ideal stage to highlight Hong Kong's role as a springboard for international growth, particularly through tax incentives. "Suppose you have set up an office and hired staff in Hong Kong," Law said. "When expanding into Southeast Asia or investing in other foreign markets, you can take advantage of the double taxation avoidance agreements signed between Hong Kong and many countries. "At their peak, tax savings could exceed 50 percent." Another first-time exhibitor is a craft brewery that is working up a thirst at the expo for its award-winning, Hong Kong-made beer. The brewery's marketing director said the brand aims to tap the mainland market, confident that its craft beers will be competitive as many mainland consumers have a strongappetite for Hong Kong products. The event has also drawn local academic institutions,including the Hong Kong Polytechnic University. PolyU vice-president Zheng Zijian said theuniversity, which has established 12 research institutes on the mainland over the past threeyears for incubation programmes, has brought innovation projects such as robots and foodtechnology to the expo. The institution, he stressed, has benefited from the mainland'scomprehensive domestic industrial chain and robust support from local governments. “Ourpractice over the past few years is to take the path of deep integration with the mainland andcontribute to integration with the country's talent, science and technology, and education,” Zheng said. - Police honour fallen officer Chu at memorial (2026-11-06 07:29)

Police paid tribute to senior police constable Chu Chun-kwok, who died in September, at the Force Remembrance Day ceremony on Friday. Chu was paralysed after he was attacked while on duty in 2005 and passed away this year at the age of 52. The ceremony was led by police commissioner Joe Chow, who joined police representatives in honouring full-time and auxiliary officers killed in the line of duty. In his address, Chow said the fallen officers had given their lives for Hong Kong’s safety and stability. Their example, he added, places a responsibility on current officers to carry on the values and work they stood for. Turning to Chu, Chow said his death, along with the sacrifices of other fallen officers, showed a firm commitment to protecting the public and their property and to moving the force forward. He described their dedication as a guide for the force as it seeks to improve and meet future challenges. Chow also said the sacrifices of those who came before had created a strong foundation for both the force and society, and urged officers to remain united and committed to serving the community. The ceremony included the sounding of the "Last Post" and a two-minute silence. Wreaths were laid by Chow, police commandant Johnny Leung and representatives of police formations and associations before the Books of Remembrance, which list the names of fallen officers. - Choi to seek additional funding for university towns (2026-11-06 06:47)

Secretary for Education Christine Choi said on Friday that her bureau would seek additional funding for the development of university towns at the Northern Metropolis. In an interview with a local news outlet, she said universities would require much more funding from the financial secretary than the HK$10 billion loan set aside for them to build campuses there. However, she also pointed out that the government had to take into consideration a need to prioritise public funding allocations. Given that the development at the three university towns – located in San Tin, Hung Shui Kiu and Ta Kwu Ling – would be carried out in phases, Choi said she believed institutions would not need to go heavily into debt in the process. The government has been taking applications for the three sites slated for the Hung Shui Kiu University Town, which spans around 26 hectares in total, since September. Choi said institutions need not to be in a hurry to compete for the sites, as they only account for less than 10 percent of the 300-hectare Northern Metropolis university town area. On whether leading universities fromoutside the SAR would also participate in the project, Choi said she believed they would beinclined to collaborate with local institutions in setting up joint laboratories and researchcentres, as they have to take into consideration their finances and the geopolitical situation. At aLegislative Council panel meeting, Choi said the SAR’s university town plan is very differentfrom the ones on the mainland by having compounding advantages that place Hong Kong in aunique position. For instance, she said, the city is highly international and diversified. “Ourinstitutions have long enjoyed a globally renowned reputation in academic and research fields,"Choi said. "Also, in terms of our ability to attract top talent as well as in aspects such as policiesand the legal system, Hong Kong also has unique advantages.” Choi added that Hong Kongwould also complement other university towns on the mainland. - Exchange Fund makes HK$18.6bn as tough quarter looms (2026-11-06 06:06)

The Hong Kong Monetary Authority said on Friday it chalked up an income of HK$18.6 billion from Exchange Fund investments in the third quarter as its chief executive warned of uncertainties in the fourth quarter. Gains from investments in Hong Kong stocks came in at HK$9.1 billion while the return from bond investments only amounted to HK$300 million. Investments in other equities contributed HK$1.5 billion while foreign exchange investment brought HK$7.7 billion. The authority said total investment income in the first three quarters of this year amounted to HK$171.9 billion. Speaking after attending a meeting of the Legislative Council’s financial affairs panel, authority chief executive Eddie Yue said the fund's performance would continue to fluctuate this quarter, describing it as a “difficult quarter with uncertainties”. The uncertainties run the gamut from Middle East tensions, financial conditions in major markets, to developments on the artificial intelligence front. “The US midterm election results have drawn market attention to whether the AI build-out and data-centre construction will slow down, as many states appear to be resistant to it,” Yue pointed out. “This also contributed to the volatility in the stock market [on Thursday night].” However, Yue emphasised that the Exchange Fund is a long-term venture and that people should look at its long-term returns rather than focus on short-term results. The authority, he also stressed, has been maintaining a diversified allocation of assets to make the portfolio more defensive. Edited by Aaron Tam

- Privacy chief backs tighter land-search rules (2026-11-06 04:01)

Privacy commissioner Ada Chung expressed support on Friday for government moves to tighten land record search arrangements, while raising concerns that misuse of land registry data may be getting worse. Her comments come as the government tabled eight pieces of subsidiary legislation in the Legislative Council for the changes. Under the new arrangements, land searches must meet one of nine specified purposes. Speaking on RTHK, Chung said the purposes – which could be part of property deals and valuations – had to be concrete and clear so searchers would stick to declarations of their intended use of the data and not stray into potentially misusing it. She said her office had received 20 complaints in five years aboutalleged misuse of land registry data, which included instances where owners were doxxed onsocial media, and the sending of promotional mail. Six complaints came this year alone, Chungpointed out. "We've seen cases where land registry data was used for ... other purposes such ascyberbullying and doxxing. Not a single case of that kind should happen, and we've already hadsix this year, so the trend is worsening," she said. Chung said the new rules on land searchesmake the system clearer, better protect owners' privacy, and help people to avoid breaking thelaw. She noted that the Personal Data (Privacy) Ordinance's exemption for journalistic activitiesalso requires a public-interest basis, matching the purpose of the new arrangements. Edited byAaron Tam

- 'FundHK' crowdfunding website not associated with RTHK (2026-11-06 03:53)

Radio Television Hong Kong (RTHK) said on Friday it has no ties with a crowdfunding website operating under the name “FundHK” that used the acronym “RTHK” in its promotional materials and claimed that “RTHK” is one of its “media and institutional partners”. "RTHK hereby clarifies that it has no affiliation, partnership, collaboration, authorisation, endorsement, or any other form of relationship whatsoever with FundHK or its operating entity," an RTHK statement said. The broadcaster said any representation suggesting otherwise is unauthorised and does not reflect the position of RTHK. It said members of the public who suspect fraud or become aware of any potentially unlawful activities are advised to report the matter to police immediately and seek appropriate assistance. - HK can help 'bend the curve' on rising drug costs: FS (2026-11-06 03:41)

Financial Secretary Paul Chan on Friday said Hong Kong can play a key role in reversing the rising cost of bringing new medicines to patients, as he opened the third International Bio-Computing Innovation Summit in the SAR. In his opening speech, Chan drew on two contrasting "laws" to frame the challenge facing the life sciences industry. Moore's Law describes how the cost of computing power has gone down – while medicine is going down the opposite path. For some seven decades, he said, the cost of bringing a new drug to patients roughly doubled every nine years, a phenomenon known as Eroom's Law. "Behind that rising curve are promising treatments that were never able to secure funding, and patients waiting for better medical options," Chan said. "Eroom's Law describes the past. It needs not dictate the future." Chan identified three forces that could help "bend the curve", and said Hong Kong could contribute to each. The first is the power of computing to transform biological research, he said, as gene sequencing becomes cheaper and AI allows scientists not only to read the code of life, but to model and "write" it – designing molecules, antibodies and enzymes rather than relying on laboratory trial and error. He noted that a drug discovered by generative AI entered phase three clinical trials this year, and that the company behind it is listed in Hong Kong. Regulators, he added, are beginning to accept evidence from computer models and alternatives to animal testing. The second force, Chan said, is the changing geography of drug innovation. " China now is no longer just a market for global pharmaceutical companies. It has become an indispensable part of their global research and development network," he said, noting thatoverseas licensing deals for innovative drugs from China reached nearly US$140 billion in totalvalue last year, almost 10 times the level in 2021. The third force is capital – "not just how muchwe invest, but how well we put it to work," he said. He highlighted the power of the city's capitalmarkets, noting Hong Kong has become the world's second-largest fundraising centre forbiotechnology since listing reforms for pre-revenue biotech firms in 2018. Chan said HongKong's role is increasingly clear: to bring models, patients, markets and capital together, andreduce the time and cost of bringing new treatments to market. He pointed to theestablishment of the Hong Kong Centre for Medical Products Regulation, efforts in Hetao tomake it easier for data and biosamples to move across the boundary, the new Life and HealthTechnology Research Institute, and a third medical school being built with HKUST. "If this is thedecade in which we finally bend that curve, let Hong Kong play a part in making it happen," hesaid. Edited by Aaron Tam

- GBA offers limitless opportunities for laywers: Lam (2026-11-06 03:11)

Secretary for Justice Paul Lam has called on legal practitioners from the two SARs to obtain Greater Bay Area (GBA) practice qualifications to tap into the area's limitless opportunities. The GBA lawyers' scheme – which allows those qualified to practice in nine mainland cities – was regularised in September after a six-year pilot run. Speaking at the Second Guangdong-Hong Kong-Macao Greater Bay Area Lawyers Forum that was held during the Legal Week on Friday, Lam said more than 700 legal practitioners from Hong Kong and Macao have so far obtained the qualification. "The Greater Bay Area has the characteristic of 'one country, two systems and three jurisdictions'," he said. "Greater Bay Area lawyers with dual practice qualifications will serve as pioneers." Lam noted that the GBA is among the areas with the highest degree of openness and strongest economic vitality in the country. Hong Kong, he said, will step up the closer interface of rules and laws on the safeguards of the rule of law in the GBA, as laid out in its inaugural five-year plan. With more than 900 participants attending the event at the Convention and Exhibition Centre in Wan Chai in-person or online, the minister urged them to take the chance to understand the latest GBA developments, grasp new opportunities and expand into new fields. - Police to deploy facial recognition on CCTV networks (2026-11-06 00:51)

Police said facial recognition technology will be rolled out across its CCTV network this month to assist in criminal searches and locate high-risk missing persons, with some of the captured data stored for up to 180 days. Officers said they have so far installed around 10,000 cameras under the SmartView initiative, alongside connections to a further 10,000 from other government departments and public organisations. Covered locations include, among others, Kai Tak Sports Park, Hong Kong International Airport, cross-harbour tunnels, MTR stations and public housing estates. Superintendent Raymond Cheng said the facial recognition feature can be activated anytime on all police cameras, as well as third-party feeds integrated into the SmartView system. However, he explained that the feature will only be triggered during active criminal searches or to locate high-risk missing persons, to save resources. "For the 24 hours analysis,not all of them can be used at the same time because of the resources," Cheng said. " But if weneed to use, we can spend the resources on particular CCTV, and of course it can be usedaround the clock." In separate pilot tests, police said the facial recognition technology hasalready helped them arrest a robbery suspect and locate an elderly man with dementia within1.5 hours of being reported missing. Officers said CCTV footage will only be kept for a maximumof 31 days. However, photos of individuals captured by the facial recognition technology, alongwith metadata such as location, date, time, and facial characteristics, will be retained for 180days. Meanwhile, police revealed that at least four shopping malls have agreed to connect theirCCTV feeds to the police network. RTHK understands these include Tuen Mun Town Plaza,Olympian City, Kwai Chung Shopping Centre, and Sierra Life in Fanling. Cheng said malls thathave installed CCTV cameras are required by law to display signs warning people that recordingis in progress. However, the superindendent noted the Department of Justice (DOJ) advised thatit should be voluntary for malls to disclose whether their CCTV feeds are connected to the policenetwork. "We will follow the advice from the DOJ to encourage shopping malls or theorganisations to post our notice to announce that our system is connected with their CCTV," Cheng added. Police have been installing cameras in public places with high crime rates andheavy pedestrian flow since 2024, aiming to reach a target of 60,000 cameras by 2028 to coverthe entire city. An additional 6,500 cameras will be installed in the developing NorthernMetropolis after 2028, bringing the total number of public surveillance cameras to around66,500 in 2031. Since the project began, the force said its CCTV network has helped solve nearly2,200 criminal cases, including murder, robbery, and arson, leading to more than 2,800 arrests.Edited by Aaron Tam

- Tang condemns external smearing over Wong sentence (2026-11-05 10:13)

Secretary for Security Chris Tang strongly condemned on Thursday attacks by external forces following the sentencing of former activist Joshua Wong, who was imprisoned for 10 years after pleading guilty to conspiring with foreign countries or external elements to endanger national security. Tang said the court, in passing sentence on Wong, found that he, Nathan Law, who has absconded, and others had continued to collude with foreign officials and outlets in calling for sanctions and hostile measures against the nation, Hong Kong and their officials. He reiterated that Wong was sentenced under fair and open judicial proceedings, showing that the SAR abides by the rule of law. "Those launching attacks against us are exactly the same external forces that Wong and Law attempted to collude... They must be strongly condemned, and Hong Kong citizens must recognise and acknowledge that clearly," Tang said. Speaking outside the High Court earlier on Thursday, Steve Li, chief superintendent of the police's national securitydepartment, said Wong had taken part in social movements from a young age and committedvarious offences in adulthood. Li said he hoped Wong would reflect on his wrongdoings. "Isincerely hope that for the rest of his time in prison, apart from reflecting on the wrongdoingshe has done to the country and to the Hong Kong SAR, he must seize the opportunity to learnhow to respect the law and properly understand his own country," he said. - DOJ launches HK$20,000 lawtech funding scheme (2026-11-05 09:48)

The Department of Justice has launched a funding scheme aimed at helping small and medium-sized law firms and newly qualified barristers adopt legal technology. The Funding Scheme for LawTech Solution Subscription, managed by the Law Society of Hong Kong and the Hong Kong Bar Association, will provide eligible applicants with up to HK$20,000 for a one-year subscription to designated legal technology services. The list covers services from 14 local, mainland and overseas providers, spanning legal research, document drafting, workflow management and hearing support. Eligible applicants are sole practitioners, Hong Kong law firms with five or fewer partners, and barristers with no more than seven years of call. Speaking to reporters at Hong Kong Legal Week on Thursday, Deputy Secretary for Justice Horace Cheung said the pilot scheme would ease the financial burden on applicants seeking to improve their ability to adopt lawtech services. "We hope that we can use such kind of financial incentive to encourage them to use the lawtech tools in their practice and we believe that after this pilot scheme, they will know how good the legal tool can help them in their practice," he said. "I would say that is only the beginning. Certainly we will monitor the progress of the pilot scheme and see what we can do further for the legal sector in the years ahead." Cheung also said the Department of Justice would release guidance notes on the application of technology in legal practice. The notes, he said, are intended to give the legal profession principles to consider and practical advice on adopting legal technology, helping practitioners guard against potential risks while remaining mindful of their ongoing professional responsibilities. Meanwhile, José-Antonio Maurellet, chairman of the Hong Kong Bar Association, said the scheme was timely and far-sighted and would benefit about 500 members. He believes it would encourage younger members to invest more time and resources in training and to stay competitive. Roden Tong, president of the Law Society of Hong Kong, for his part, said the Department of Justice had introduced the scheme for a second time, adding that the support helped the legal profession make better use of technology and improve efficiency. The application deadline is January 29. Edited by Tony Sabine

- HK 'to widen trade reach to help nation go global' (2026-11-05 08:29)

Chief Executive John Lee on Thursday said Hong Kong would continue to expand its international trade network to better contribute to the country's overall development. Speaking at the Hong Kong sub-forum of the Hongqiao International Economic Forum in Shanghai, he noted the event was the first major conference held by the SAR since the unveiling of its first-ever five-year plan in September. The conference, Lee said, allowed experts and industryleaders from both the mainland and Hong Kong to gather and explore how the city couldleverage its unique position under "One Country, Two Systems" and integrate into nationaldevelopment. One key focus area is trade, he said. “Hong Kong has become the fifth-largestmerchandise trading entity in the world, having signed free-trade agreements with 21economies and investment agreements with 34 economies," Lee said. "The SAR government willcontinue to expand its international economic and trade network to play a greater role in thecountry’s high-standard opening up." The world, Lee pointed out, is experiencing aonce-in-a-century transformation, which is happening alongside a global supply chainrestructuring and rapid technological advancement. He stressed that Hong Kong mustproactively plan for its future and implement a forward-looking strategic plan with a calm andmeasured approach. Another key focus area, Lee said, is finance. Describing it as Hong Kong’sfundamental and greatest area of strength, he stressed that the SAR must consolidate its role asan international financial centre. He added that Hong Kong would strengthen its position as theworld's largest offshore renminbi hub to expand the global use of the currency and activelybuild a commodity and gold trading ecosystem. Lee also noted that Hong Kong wouldproactively align with national scientific research and industrial strategies, accelerate itsinvestment in science and technology, and help mainland enterprises expand overseas throughits GoGlobal Task Force. Later, Lee toured various booths hosted by Hong Kong enterprises andinstitutions taking part in the China International Import Expo, which is being held concurrentlywith the forum. He listened to a briefing by Hong Kong Polytechnic University representatives,and at one booth, tasted traditional sweetheart cakes — also known as wife cakes. Arepresentative told the chief executive that the pastries have been a huge hit at high-speed railstations on the mainland, adding that they have revamped their packaging to feature HongKong elements on the design, such as trams, to appeal to younger generations. Lee also visiteda craft beer booth to try a brew infused with the flavour of salty-lemon 7Up — an iconic HongKong cha chaan teng drink that mixes 7Up with salted preserved lemon. A representative at thebooth told him that Hong Kong enjoys a major advantage in sourcing raw ingredients thanks tobeing a highly international city. Lee said Hong Kong could host its own beer festival in thefuture, encouraging the business to keep growing and build itself into a premier local brand forsuch events. Frederick Ma, chairman of the Hong Kong Trade Development Council, said thecouncil led a delegation of more than 70 Hong Kong enterprises at this year's expo, with recordsset in both the number of participating exhibitors and the amount of exhibition space used._____ Last updated: 2026-11-05 HKT 17:10 Edited by Tony Sabine

- Wong undermined HK's prosperity and stability: CE (2026-11-05 08:09)

Chief Executive John Lee on Thursday said Joshua Wong was one of the “primary culprits responsible for undermining Hong Kong’s prosperity and stability” after he was jailed for 10 years for conspiracy to collude with foreign countries or external elements to endanger national security. In a statement, Lee said Wong has repeatedly broken the law over the years, adding that before the implementation of the National Security Law (NSL) Wong, Nathan Law andothers persistently colluded with foreign countries and tried to get them to impose sanctionsagainst China and the SAR. Lee went on to say that after the NSL took effect, Wong, Law andtheir accomplices “showed no repentance and continued to act as agents of foreign countriesand external forces, wantonly persisting in conspiring to collude with foreign countries orexternal forces to endanger national security, in a vain attempt to exert pressure on the CentralAuthorities and the HKSAR Government through external forces, betraying Hong Kong whileremaining incorrigible". Meanwhile, a government spokesman said Wong's sentence " completely shattered the illusion of individuals endangering national security that they couldescape liability under the guise of so-called 'international battlefront' or ' internationaladvocacy', and demonstrated to the international community the HKSAR's firm determination tosafeguard national security". - Joshua Wong jailed 10 years for foreign collusion (2026-11-05 04:13)

Former activist Joshua Wong was on Thursday jailed for 10 years after pleading guilty to conspiracy to collude with foreign countries or external elements to endanger national security. High Court Judge William Tam found the offence was of a “grave nature” under the National Security Law. The court said Wong and his affiliates, including Nathan Law, persisted after the NSL took effect in calling for foreign sanctions, blockade or other hostile measures against the People's Republic of China, the Hong Kong SAR and their officials. They deliberately adapted roles so overseas allies made blatant calls for such sanctions, while Wong, remaining in Hong Kong, published and bolstered the calls. Judge Tam took a starting point of 13 years, then cut three years for the guilty plea and mitigation, leaving 10 years – the statutory minimum for a grave offence. Two months and two days of the new term will run concurrently with the sentence Wong is already serving for another subversion case. Speaking to reporters outside the High Court, Steve Li, Chief Superintendent of the police's National Security Department, said that Wong took part in social movements from a young age and committed various offences as an adult. Li said he hopes Wong will reflect on his wrongdoings. "I sincerely hope that for the rest of his time in prison, apart from reflecting on the wrongdoings he has done to the country and to the Hong Kong SAR, he must seize the opportunity to learn how to respect the law and properly understand his own country," he said. - HK 'is largest cross-boundary wealth management hub' (2026-11-05 03:59)

Financial Secretary Paul Chan on Thursday said Hong Kong’s wealth management sector is growing strongly and is well positioned to capture a fair share of business emanating from shifting global affluence. In a keynote speech at the Wealth Management Summit, he pointed to a survey in July by the Securities and Futures Commission that showed assets under management jumped 20 percent to more than HK$42 trillion. The city, Chan said, is now the largest cross-boundary wealth management centre in the world. A survey by summit organiser Private Wealth Management Association offered a similarly encouraging picture, as it found 77 percent of member firms reported stronger demand to open accounts or book client assets in Hong Kong and that 94 percent were moderately or highly optimistic about the city's prospects over the next five years. Chan said sentiment at this week’s Global Financial Leaders’ Investment Summit, which drew some 280 international leaders from the sector, including around 120 chairmen or chief executives, was "decidedly positive", with some planning to increase investment and headcount in the city. International capital was showing fresh confidence in Hong Kong, he said, with it being reinforced by policy measures to boost private wealth management. "Our tax concession for family-owned investment vehicles is now well established and Hong Kong is home to over 3,300 single-family offices, up 25 percent in just two years," he said at the summit. "The New Capital Investment Entrant Scheme has received some 4,300 applications, representing an expected investment of HK$150 billion, and we have introduced legislation to further enhance the preferential tax regimes for funds, single-family offices and carry interest, which we aim to pass by the end of this year." Chan said higher rates and uncertainty were redrawing the map for capital flows, with cash earning a return again and investors diversifying across markets and currencies. Hong Kong is a clear beneficiary, he said, noting that deposits rose 7.7 percent to HK$20.9 trillion in the first nine months of this year. Initial public offerings raised, Chan pointed out, a record HK$388 billion and capital is arriving from the United States and Europe, as well as the mainland, Southeast Asia, Central Asia and the Middle East. He also pointed to technology and AI as a growing source of wealth: tech is now the largest source of wealth among the world's richest tycoons, and mainland billionaire fortunes rose over 20 percent to US$1.8 trillion last year. Hong Kong is capturing it at source – 116 A- and H-share listings in the first three quarters accounted for about 70 percent of funds raised, over half of which were in AI, semiconductors and robotics, with some 500 applications in the pipeline. - John Lee visits Shanghai to promote SAR businesses (2026-11-04 14:00)

Chief Executive John Lee arrived in Shanghai on Wednesday afternoon after visiting Beijing, where he attended the opening ceremony of the 29th Beijing Hong Kong Economic Cooperation Symposium. In a Facebook post, Lee thanked representatives from the Ministry of Commerce, Beijing's Liaison Office in the SAR, and the Shanghai Municipal People's Government, as well as colleagues from the Hong Kong Economic and Trade Office in Shanghai for meeting him at the airport. Lee will attend the opening ceremony of the ninth China International Import Expo (CIIE) on Thursday. "This year's CIIE has attracted participants from 162 countries, regions, and international organisations, with a total exhibition area exceeding 440,000 square metres," the post read. The CE will also attend the Hongqiao International Economic Forum. "There, I willhighlight how Hong Kong is leveraging its unique strengths to integrate into and serve thenation's overall development, showcasing our achievements and opportunities." Lee saidShanghai and Hong Kong share deep historical ties, with the SAR pushing ahead plans toestablish a "sister port" relationship with Shanghai within this year. He added that a pilotproject for the mutual exchange of trade data was launched last month and is expected tobenefit local small and medium-sized enterprises that export goods from the mainland. Lee isalso expected to meet with Shanghai officials to deepen cooperation before returning to HongKong on Friday. Edited by Aaron Tam

- RTHK signs MoU with Tianjin Haihe Media Group (2026-11-04 13:00)

Radio Television Hong Kong (RTHK) has signed a Memorandum of Understanding (MoU) with Tianjin Haihe Media Group, in a bid to boost bilateral collaboration in areas such as talent exchange and events. The MoU was signed during a four-day trip by Director of Broadcasting Angelina Kwan to the mainland, which ended on Wednesday. During the trip, Kwan, as well as participants of RTHK's national studies programme, called on the Hong Kong and Macao Affairs Office of the State Council, and met Deputy Director Zhang Dongmei. Kwan also visited the National Radio and Television Administration and the Beijing Radio and Television Station to explore opportunities for strengthening exchange and co-operation. On Tuesday, Kwan signed an MoU with Tianjin Haihe Media Group President Ma Bo. The two sides agreed to establish a framework for bilateral collaboration spanning programme resources, talent exchanges, co-operation on platform and copyright licensing, as well as on-ground events. RTHK said the the partnership will facilitate the distribution of its content to the Beijing-Tianjin-Hebei region, while enabling Tianjin Haihe Media Group's productions to reach international audiences through RTHK's platforms. RTHK has signed MoUs with eight mainland and overseas media organisations so far this year. "By building a growing network of broadcaster partnerships and deepening collaboration on an ongoing basis, RTHK is giving concrete expression to its strategic commitment to leveraging Hong Kong's unique role as a connector between the Chinese mainland and the wider world, thereby enhancing Hong Kong's international communication capacity and sharing the stories of the nation and Hong Kong on the global stage," a statement read. - ICAC charges former HKEX vice president (2026-11-04 08:21)

A former vice president of the Hong Kong Exchanges and Clearing (HKEX) was charged by the ICAC on Wednesday for allegedly obtaining dishonest access to the HKEX’ s internal information system. The system contained confidential information involving listed companies, according to the anti-graft agency. Geoffrey Tong, 39, and his mother, Leung Yiu-chun, 68,jointly face one count of obtaining access to computer with a view to dishonest gain for himselfor another under the Crimes Ordinance. The charge alleges that the two defendants obtainedaccess to the HKEX's internal information system with a view to dishonest gain betweenFebruary 2018 and April 2023. The ICAC investigation revealed that Tong allegedly accessedconfidential information of listed companies unrelated to his duties on multiple occasions. "Subsequently, the investment account of his mother, Leung, engaged in share transactions ofthe relevant listed companies, yielding profits exceeding HK$500,000," the ICAC said in astatement. The case was brought to the Eastern Magistrates' Courts for mention onWednesday. The ICAC said it would not rule out further prosecution as the investigationcontinues. Edited by Edmond Fong

- 'Reservation effective in cutting Po Pin Chau visits' (2026-11-04 05:30)

Secretary for Environment and Ecology Tse Chin-wan on Wednesday said the government was reviewing the trial results of the real-name reservation system for the Po Pin Chau trail in Sai Kung East Country Park. Speaking to lawmakers at the Legislative Council, Tse said authorities were looking at areas for further improvement and whether a fee could be imposed. Tse noted that the reservation system had effectively controlled visitor numbers on peak days compared to the past. He said the Po Pin Chau section received an average of 2,000 visitors per day during the Chinese New Year and Labour Day Golden Week holidays – before the reservation system was introduced, while the number was kept to around 950 during the National Day Golden Week with the reservation requirement. The highest visitor flow recorded at the Po Pin Chau viewing platform was also cut by more than 30 percent compared to the past, he added. "Visitors mainly arrived in the morning. As the reservation system effectively kept the number of visitors within 500 per time slot, visitor flow on the trail was dispersed in an orderly manner, and visitors were able to tour in a more comfortable and safe environment without overcrowding," he said. "Implementation experience shows that by effectively controlling the visitor numbers and diverting visitor flow, the reservation system not only reduced the wear and tear caused by visitors to the natural environment but also significantly improved the overall visitor experience." He added that the reservation system operated well, with most visitors satisfied with the arrangement. The minister also said the government could collaborate with the tourism sector to launch eco-tours to further develop ecotourism products. He said part of the 2,000 daily quota of Po Pin Chau trail could be reserved for tour groups. Edited by Tony Sabine

- 'World unis to step up collaboration over NM' (2026-11-04 05:18)

Leaders from universities around the world attending a conference in Hong Kong on Wednesday said they believe the Northern Metropolis project will foster closer collaboration among institutions. On the sidelines of the World Class University Presidents Forum, Mark Scott, vice chancellor and president of the University of Sydney, recognised Hong Kong's leading position in education, which has five institutions ranked in the world's top 100 in the QS World University Rankings 2027. “There isn’t another city in the world that is achieving soremarkably at such scale, and so we have much to learn from Hong Kong,” he said. “One ofthe things I think we can learn is the commitment of leadership that sees investment in highereducation, in research and in learning – as a key to economic growth and prosperity, and aricher and fairer society.” Scott also said the University of Sydney is very excited about whatthe mega project has to offer. “We are very impressed by the level of financial commitmentand long-term engagement from government and leadership here, and we are keen to find away to be productive partners.” Ebrahim Al Hajri, president of Khalifa University of Science andTechnology in the United Arab Emirates, said the institution looks forward to playing a part inthe development of the Northern Metropolis by collaborating with other institutions to “createlocal and global impact”. “This is actually physical research without borders – connectingboth sides to technology, development, research, talent cultivation,” he said. “Not only that,but the translation of research into commercial opportunities to benefit society and economy atlarge.” The Worldwide Universities Network – a leading global higher education network thatcomprises of 23 research-intensive universities – said the hub represents a “significantmoment” for institutions to rethink global collaboration. “It’s not just about the scale andconcentration for Hong Kong,” its executive director Dawn Freshwater said. “It’s actuallyabout a beacon of excellence globally for ways in which we might partner, collaborate and trulyfocus on how we are going to solve the issues now facing civilisation – and that is substantial.”Fudan University president Jin Li, for his part, believes the Northern Metropolis can further helpHong Kong connect to the world. The mega hub is also crucial for the SAR to contribute to thenation’s development, he added. Edited by Edmond Fong

- CE calls for closer cooperation with nation's capital (2026-11-04 03:29)

Chief Executive John Lee on Wednesday called for closer financial and innovative ties with the city of Beijing, as he continued his visit to the capital. Speaking at a symposium on Beijing-Hong Kong cooperation, Lee said finance had been a key area for collaboration between the two cities over the years. He called for promoting two-way financial opening-up to facilitate economic transformation. “Hong Kong, as an international financial centre, connects mainland markets and global capital,” he said. “It acts as the most convenient international financing platform for enterprises in Beijing. “Through cross-border fund management, wealth management and a network connecting global investors, it serves enterprises’ needs for business expansion.” Lee said the two cities would continue to serve two-way financing for enterprises, and jointly expand green and sustainable finance, as well as offshore renminbi business. He also expressed hope of deepening innovative cooperation between the SAR and Beijing, as the nation developed new quality productive forces and promoted technological revolution and industrial transformation. The innovation sectors in the two cities would promote collaboration in life and health technology, artificial intelligence and robotics, he said. Lee added that Hong Kong would continue to assist mainland enterprises in going global. Edited by Tony Sabine

- Yau highlights benefits of RCEP accession for HK (2026-11-04 03:21)

Secretary for Commerce and Economic Development Algernon Yau said Hong Kong's entry into the Regional Comprehensive Economic Partnership could inject fresh impetus into advancing the Free Trade Area of the Asia-Pacific (FTAAP) agenda. "We welcome the establishment of the Accession Working Group for Hong Kong in September this year, and hope that our accession could inject fresh impetus into advancing the FTAAP agenda," he said during a virtual meeting at the 37th Asia-Pacific Economic Cooperation (Apec) Ministerial Meeting held on Tuesday. Yau said that enhancing economic integration has been the core objective of Apec, and that one of the directions is to continue to advance the FTAAP. He called on member economies to continue to strengthen connectivity in various areas, enabling the efficient flow of goods, services, capital and people, while narrowing development gaps and creating opportunities for all sectors across the region. Yau also stressed that the multilateral trading system must remain the foundation of regional integration and international trade, highlighting the importance of enhancing co-operation to deal with the seismic changes in the trade landscape. - HK offers businesses growth and capital: FS (2026-11-04 03:04)

Financial Secretary Paul Chan said Hong Kong is well-placed to provide businesses with both growth opportunities and long-term capital. The finance chief made his remarks on Wednesday during a conversation session with investors on the second day of the Global Financial Leaders' Investment Summit in Central. Chan noted that a company needs different forms of capital at each stage of development to turn its potential into sustained growth. This, he said, is exactly where Hong Kong comes into play. “Under the 'One Country, Two Systems' framework, Hong Kong is closely connected to the Chinese mainland, while a common law legal system, free flow of capital and international networks provide a trusted and familiar environment for global investors to take part in China's enormous growth,” Chan said. “Here, we already bring together venture capital, private equity, family offices and asset managers, with deep equity and bond markets. Our task is to connect them more closely across the corporate life cycle.” He said follow-on fundraising on the Hong Kong Stock Exchange reached HK$570 billion in the first nine months of the year, showing that the city’s market continues to support companies well beyond their initial listings. Chan also said the aim is to expand allocation choices to help investors manage risks and liquidity in support of long-term value creation. Hong Kong will keep raising its market efficiency with faster approvals, streamlined processes and clearer frameworks for new financial products – all without compromising its integrity, he added. - HK's dominance in QS rankings 'not by chance' (2026-11-04 03:00)

Acting chief executive Eric Chan on Wednesday said Hong Kong would continue to stay at the forefront of education amid the latest accolades for the city's univiersities. Speaking at the World Class University Presidents Forum, he noted that higher education had always served as a cornerstone for the SAR’s success. The city is a global hub for education and talent, Chan said, noting that five local institutions took half of top 10 places in the latest QS Asia University Rankings. Three of them ranked the top five. “This is not by chance. It is the result of sustained government investment, clear policy direction and the hard work of our universities,” he said.“It reflects our commitment to excellence, openness, academic freedom and institutionalautonomy.” Hong Kong, Chan said, would keep expanding its horizon and align with thenation’s development to remain in its leading position. With the three university towns at theNorthern Metropolis as well as the SAR’s Study in Hong Kong brand, he said the governmentwelcomed people from the mainland and all over the world to pursue their studies here.“Hong Kong is a bridge between the mainland and the global higher education system. We areopening doors for our youth to engage with diverse cultures and cutting-edge ideas," Chan said. "By nurturing globally-minded innovators, we plant the seeds for a more collaborative andprosperous world.” Edited by Tony Sabine

- Software update triggers HK parking meter outage (2026-11-03 14:11)

The Transport Department said a software update triggered a citywide malfunction of Hong Kong’s parking meter system on Tuesday. The department said preliminary investigations found that a software update in the morning caused a back-end software fault, which prevented the system from making a normal connection with the parking meters. It added that about 11,000 parking meters were affected across the city. The department has instructed the operator to conduct a thorough investigation into the cause of the outage and submit a detailed report. There is no evidence that the system was attacked at the moment, the department said, adding it has reported the matter to the Digital Policy Office. The operator will arrange for full refunds for all meter transactions between 8am and 12.15pm to users, and will strive to complete the approval of the refunds within this week, it added. The Transport Department received a report at around 8.20am from the operator that the parking meter system had malfunctioned, with payment functions suspended or meter displays not operating normally. The system resumed normal operations at 12.15pm. Edited by Aaron Tam

- HK recovery uneven despite high GDP: economist (2026-11-03 12:38)

A local economist said Hong Kong’s third-quarter GDP performance has lifted business sentiment, but the recovery remains uneven and will take time to broaden. Ho Lok-sang, adjunct professor with the Academy for Applied Policy Studies and Education Futures at the Education University of Hong Kong, made the assessment as advance estimates showed Hong Kong’s economy grew 5.2 percent year on year in the third quarter of 2026. The clearest sign of recovery, he said, was in prime office space. "Especially for the Grade A centrally located locations, [the] office take-up rate is pretty impressive," he said. "Now, certainly it’s recovering." But Ho stressed that the strength is not spreading beyond that segment. "On the outside of the Grade A and centrally located areas, office demand is still relatively weak, and the demand for commercial properties is still relatively weak," he said. He added that a broaderrecovery will not come quickly and will likely depend on lower rents. "I think that it will takequite some time to recover, and I think recovery will also necessitate a decline in rents," Hosaid. Ho was more upbeat about the rest of the year's outlook. "Definitely the full year growth isgoing to be quite strong, and I am pretty confident that it will be over four percent or could beas much as 4.5 percent," he said. The government's real GDP growth forecast for 2026 as awhole is 3.5 to 4.5 percent. Ho said the financial sector is performing "pretty well, extremelywell", with IPOs still at a very high level and "no sign of it ebbing". He added that exports, too,are "doing quite well". But he flagged persistent weak spots: "Demand in terms of bothconstruction demand and also the retail consumption demand and restaurant business are stilllagging behind". To support these sectors, Ho pointed to major events and tourism. "Of coursethe major events – for example concerts and Halloween and so on – it's entirely possible toboost tourism even more," he said. "Tourism is doing pretty well this year, and we hope that thetourists can stay a bit longer and consume a bit more." Ho said that outcome depends on thebusiness sector and the government continuing to promote such major events. Meanwhile,Kenny Shui, vice president of Our Hong Kong Foundation, said the third-quarter figures pointedto strengthening momentum: goods exports rose 30.4 percent on AI and electronics demand,while services exports grew 4.3 percent on tourism and financial activity. But he said privateconsumption rose just 2.8 percent, slower than the previous quarter, showing that the strengthin retail and investment has yet to fully reach households. "Growth momentum is broadening,but the recovery still needs to be felt more widely," Shui said. With first-nine-month growth at5.1 percent, Shui expects a fourth-quarter growth of four to five percent and full-year growth ofaround five percent – above the government's forecast, leaving room for an upward revision.He cautioned, however, that interest rates could weigh on business investment and householdspending, and with unemployment at 3.9 percent, consumption still needs job and incomesupport. In the fourth quarter, the key will be whether exports stay strong and consumptionand employment improve, Shui added. Edited by Aaron Tam

- HK takes five of top 10 in QS Asia university rankings (2026-11-03 12:26)

Hong Kong has dominated the QS Asia University Rankings 2027, with five of the city's institutions placing in the top 10. The University of Hong Kong (HKU) retained the top spot, while City University of Hong Kong (CityUHK) rose to fourth and the Chinese University of Hong Kong (CUHK) climbed to fifth. CityUHK and CUHK had tied for seventh a year earlier. The Hong Kong Polytechnic University (PolyU) and the Hong Kong University of Science and Technology (HKUST) shared ninth place. The rankings, compiled by international higher education experts at QS, assessed more than 1,700 universities across 26 higher education systems. Ben Sowter, QS' senior vice-president, said Hong Kong continues to set the benchmark for university performance in Asia. "The University of Hong Kong leads the region for a second consecutive year, and having five Hong Kong institutions in the top 10, more than any other higher education system, is an exceptional achievement," he said. "Increasing international engagement and growing recognition among academics and employers reinforce Hong Kong'sregional strength, at a time when competition for students, researchers and academic talent isintensifying across Asia." Xiang Zhang, president and vice-chancellor of HKU, attributed theuniversity’s second straight top ranking in Asia to its community’s unwavering commitmentto academic excellence and its recent drive for change. "We will continue to draw the world’sfinest minds to shape an academic ecosystem driven by a spirit of inquiry, propelling HongKong’s advancement as an international hub for education, innovation and technology, whilesupporting the nation's high-quality development through scientific breakthroughs andcontributing to solving global challenges," he said in a statement. Meanwhile, CityUHK actingpresident Lee Chun-sing described the university’s rise into the top five for the first time as anencouraging achievement. "This progress reflects the collective efforts of our academiccommunity to pursue excellence in research and create an inspiring learning environment," Leesaid in a statement. "It also demonstrates the success of our strategic commitment to recruitingglobal academic talent and nurturing future leaders." The top 10 also included three mainlandinstitutions – among them Peking University and Tsinghua University – and two universitiesfrom Singapore. Edited by Aaron Tam

- Hong Kong economy grew 5.2pc in Q3 2026 (2026-11-03 09:13)

Hong Kong’s economy grew 5.2 percent year on year in the third quarter of 2026, buoyed by stronger exports and domestic demand, according to advance estimates. The Census and Statistics Department said the increase compared with a 4.2 percent growth in the second quarter. On a seasonally adjusted basis, GDP rose 1.9 percent quarter on quarter. For the first nine months combined, the economy grew 5.1 percent – the fastest growth for the period in five years. Goods exports rose 30.4 percent in real terms, after 28.9 percent in the second quarter, while imports grew 29.9 percent. Exports of services increased 4.3 percent. Investment strengthened, with gross domestic fixed capital formation up 7.3 percent, while private consumption grew 2.8 percent and government consumption was up 1.7 percent. A government spokesman said the economy saw robust expansion, underpinned by accelerating exports and solid domestic demand. He said the outlook remained positive, citing global artificial intelligence investment, inbound tourism, cross-boundary traffic and financial market activity. But he advised caution over geopolitical tensions in the Middle East and tighter monetary policies by major central banks. Revised GDP figures and the updated forecast for 2026 will be released on November 13. Separately, retail sales rose 6.4 percent year on year in September to a provisional HK$33.4 billion – the 17th straight month of expansion. August’s revised increase was 5.6 percent, and sales for the first nine months were up 8.3 percent by value. Online sales rose 12 percent to HK$4.4 billion in September, or 13.1 percent of total retail sales, and were up 21.2 percent for the first nine months. Retail sales volume rose 3.9 percent in September. The spokesman said solid local consumption sentiment, more visitor arrivals and earlier Mid-Autumn festive sales supported retail growth. He said upcoming mega events, festive celebrations and inbound tourism should add momentum, though external headwinds warranted close monitoring. Edited by Aaron Tam

• 'Joint task force to target bid-rigging early' (2026-11-03 08:48)

Secretary for Security Chris Tang on Tuesday said officers from an interdepartmental task force on combating bid-rigging in building maintenance and renovation projects would proactively look for clues to prevent such activities. Authorities have vowed to step up crackdowns on bid-rigging following the deadly Wang Fuk Court fire. Proposed measures included the criminalisation of bid-rigging in relation to these projects, enabling a dual-track approach of both criminal and civil enforcement. Authorities will also set up a joint task force that comprises officers from police, the ICAC and the Competition Commission to better coordinate law enforcement actions. Speaking to lawmakers at a meeting of the Legislative Council's Panel on Security and Panel on Economic Development, Tang said the task force's establishment could enable early intervention. Tang said officers would adopt different tactics against bid-rigging, such as surveillance, undercover operations and the use of informants. He added that the three agencies of the task force would also attend owners' corporation meetings to look for suspicious activities, including people who hold many proxy votes or suspected triad members engaging in harassment or intimidation. Officers would take enforcement actions when necessary, he added. "If we notice any abnormal situations at the scene that violate the law, such as intimidation and blackmail, our law enforcement colleagues on site will take immediate action," Tang said. "Even if the situation is not serious enough to require enforcement action, if we notice signs that may point to hidden crimes, we will carry out investigations." Tang said the task force would consider a series of factors when deciding which projects would be prioritised for investigation. "We will consider the impact of the projects, for example, projects conducted at large estates with a lot of residents and those involving a large amount of money, and if someone seeking to participate in bid-rigging has triad backgrounds – these are all factors we take into consideration." Secretary for Commerce and Economic Development Algernon Yau, meanwhile, told lawmakers that relevant legislative amendments to combat bid-rigging would be submitted to the legislature as soon as possible. • HK eager to help build 'enterprises of tomorrow' (2026-11-03 08:10)

Hong Kong is ambitious about helping create the "enterprises of tomorrow", Financial Secretary Paul Chan said on Tuesday in amplifying the pivotal role the Northern Metropolis would play in realising this vision. That came as he told investors at the Global Financial Leaders' Investment Summit in Central about the dedication that investors can expect of Hong Kong to strengthening its contribution to innovation. "Our ambition is not only to finance businesses created elsewhere, but also to help create the enterprises of tomorrow," Chan said. "The Northern Metropolis is central to this effort. "It will bring universities, research facilities and technology enterprises closer together, linking education, technology and talent more closely with industry." The mega development project in the northern New Territories would, Chan said, serve as a base for closer ties with other Greater Bay Area cities, allowing Hong Kong to draw on their strengths in commercialisation, engineering and advanced manufacturing. Hong Kong was eager to pair promising businesses with capital and partners, as well as give investors trusted pathways into unfamiliar sectors and economies, he added. Hong Kong had, Chan pointed out, also taken steps to widen its connections with various economies and broadenasset classes in various regions. “In Southeast Asia, we are welcoming more enterprises fromIndonesia, Thailand and Malaysia to lease in Hong Kong,” he said. “In the Middle East, HongKong and Saudi Arabia have listed ETFs, tracking each other's markets, giving investors newroutes to invest.” “In Central Asia, Kazakhstan has already tapped Hong Kong's equity andbond markets. We welcome more issuers to raise capital here through listings and bondissuances.” Chan added that Hong Kong would also continue to expand the range of assetsand financial services to give investors more options to diversify. This, he said, included acentral focus on developing a commodity and gold trading ecosystem. Edited by Tony Sabine

- Real estate recovery drives growth forecast higher: FS (2026-11-03 08:07)

Financial Secretary Paul Chan on Tuesday said all three drivers of economic growth performed well in the third quarter, with consumption, investment, and exports all recording growth to varying degrees. Hong Kong's advance estimates for the third-quarter GDP are set to be released later in the day. The financial chief had announced over the weekend that the city's full-year economic growth forecast will be revised upwards following a stronger-than-expected 5.1 percent GDP growth in the first half of the year. Chan said other factors also supported the projection, noting that full-year visitor arrivals are likely to exceed the target of 50 million and that the real estate market is improving. "The residential property market has been on the rise since the latter half of last year. Last year, the increase was approximately three percent, while the rise this year has been between seven and 10 percent. In the residential property market, it's fair to say we are moving into a stage of steady ascent.” he said. "In commercial real estate, we have observed significant improvements in office rentals, in terms of rental prices and vacancy rates, particularly in central business districts. It has also stabilised in other districts." An expected influx of visitors towards the end of the year will also have a positive impact on the retail and catering sectors, Chan added. While certain industries, such as construction, catering, and retail, are facing more pressure with higher jobless rates, Chan stressed that the overall employment situation is stable, with unemployment standing at around 3.9 percent. In predicting next year’s economic growth, Chan stressed that government economists are currently assessing the impact of several key factors. These, he said, include expected high interest rates, geopolitical uncertainties like fluctuating oil prices driven by Middle East wars, upcoming elections in major economies, and the reallocation of international funds. - Financial institutions laud HK's gateway guardianship (2026-11-03 07:09)

Global bank leaders have lauded Hong Kong for its role as a gateway between the mainland and the rest of the world, facilitating two-way financial flows and minimising risks in an era of uncertainty. At a panel meeting held at the Global Financial Leaders’ Investment Summit in Central, State Street chairman and chief executive Ronald O’Hanley noted that trade patterns had changed in recent years due to uncertainties brought by the pandemic and global conflicts. More borrowers and people looking to raise capital, he said, are looking for safer options when building supply chains and structuring financing – switching from “just in time to just incase”. “Where we’re seeing the most change is around the role of China, and Hong Kong isthe gateway to that,” O’Hanley said. "It’s the kind of movement of money north and southand movement of capital north and south, and Hong Kong is playing that role.” Barclays groupchief executive C S Venkatakrishnan said firms had been reducing their dependency on strategicimports over the past decade and that the city which is positioned as both an internationalfinancial centre as well as a domestic one is the one that can help countries manage thedependencies. “I think in order for international finance not to get caught up in the strategicbreakdown of dependence, it’s important for the international financial centres like HongKong to do what you’re doing – which is to have fair and transparent regulation to promotegrowth and to make it easy for people to operate,” he said. BNP Paribas chairman JeanLemierre noted that more mainland firms were operating in Europe. With Hong Kong being arenminbi hub, it acts as a bridge between China and Europe that helps these companies gainaccess to the euro, he said, adding that mainland firms can have better understanding of theEuropean market through the SAR. - Beijing approves removal of Winnie Ho as housing chief (2026-11-03 05:17)

The State Council has decided to remove Winnie Ho from the post of housing secretary of the Hong Kong government, Xinhua reported on Tuesday. It said the decision, made on Tuesday, was in accordance with the Basic Law and based on the suggestion of Chief Executive John Lee. That came after Lee said Ho had tendered her resignation on October 28 and indicated that she would shoulder political accountability for the Wang Fuk Court fire in Tai Po. A day after that, the government made public the investigation report by an independent committee into the deadly blaze and unveiled sweeping measures to prevent a recurrence. In a statement, Lee recounted Ho's career from the time that she joined the government in 1992, becoming director of architectural services in 2020 to being appointed as secretary for housing in 2022. Lee said Ho had been dedicated to implementing his directives, including constructing some 30,000 Light Public Housing units, shortening the composite waiting time for subsidised rental housing from 6.1 years to 4.8 years, effectively combating the abuse of public rental housing and enacting the Basic Housing Units Ordinance to eradicate substandard subdivided units. "As she officially leaves her post today, I wish her all the best in her future endeavours and a healthy life," he said. Edited by Tony Sabine

- Parking meters restored after hours of breakdown (2026-11-03 04:47)

The Transport Department said the operation of the city's parking meter system had returned to normal following emergency repairs after a breakdown that lasted for nearly four hours on Tuesday morning. The department said it received a report from the operator at about 8.20am that the system had malfunctioned. The Digital Policy Office was notified of the incident, the department said, noting that there was no evidence to suggest the system had been hacked. Secretary for Transport and Logistics Mable Chan said officials had urged the operator of the parking meters to submit a report as soon as possible. "I want to reiterate that we attach huge importance to this incident and the system malfunction. I have instructed the TransportDepartment to require the system operator, Hong Kong Telecom, to submit a report as soon aspossible. I hope an initial report can be submitted within the next 24 hours," she said. Edited byTony Sabine

- New service to simplify mainland flight transit in HK (2026-11-03 04:36)

Secretary for Transport and Logistics Mable Chan on Tuesday said a new service had been launched to streamline international travel for mainland passengers departing from regional airports via Hong Kong International Airport to destinations around the world. A pilot phase is underway in collaboration with airports in Hangzhou and Wuhan. The new initiative is part of the national aviation programme named: "Trunk-Branch Connectivity, Whole-Network Linkage". Passengers can check in for their entire journey at their local airports, and fly out to international destinations via Hong Kong, instead of having to re-claim their luggage and then check in again in the SAR. Speaking at the opening ceremony of this year's Super Terminal Expo, Chan described the scheme as a game-changing service. "To put this into perspective, this transfer platform is already active across more than 260 airports in the mainland and has accumulatively facilitated over 260 million transfer passengers, allowing tens of millions of travellers to enjoy the unprecedented convenience of one-stop check-in and seamless baggage transfers," she said. "This is far more than a commercial expansion. It is a policy breakthrough, which embeds Hong Kong directly into the national overall aviation architecture." Chan stressed that Hong Kong International Airport plays a vital “linchpin role” to fulfil the SAR’s unique mandate as a super-connector and a super value-adder that bridges the country and the world. Enhancing connectivity between the world’s second-largest economy and the rest of the world, she said, also unlocks tremendous opportunities for trade and aviation. To facilitate this goal, Chan noted that Hong Kong had also set a target of expanding its global aviation network from the existing 220 destinations to 240 under its recently unveiled five-year plan. - HK blueprint 'gives investors the certainty they seek' (2026-11-03 04:12)

Hong Kong can offer certainty, clarity and confidence to global investors at a time when structural forces are rewriting the rules of global finance, Chief Executive John Lee said on Tuesday. He was speaking in Central at the Global Financial Leaders' Investment Summit, which gathered some 280 of the sector's leaders from around the world. While blockchain and tokenisation were rebuilding the world's financial infrastructure, and AI was reshaping productivity, labour markets and competition, Lee noted that Hong Kong’s first five-year blueprint had set out clear developmental directions. “The plan delivers what markets value most: certainty,” he said. “In an era of ever-shifting terrain, it lays out a transparent roadmap, showing where Hong Kong is heading and how we intend to get there. I invite you to consider that roadmap yours as well. “And to be clear, as we rethink the playbook, as we create strategic blueprints for Hong Kong's development, we ensure the value proposition of our city remains intact – that is our competitive edge under the ‘One Country, Two Systems’ principle.” Lee added that he would be attending the Apec Economic Leaders’ Meeting inShenzhen this month with the goal of advancing regional economic cooperation. Meanwhile,Vice Premier He Lifeng said Hong Kong’s development had always been in sync with thenation, adding that ensuring the sound development of the SAR had been a key strategicconsideration of the central government. Delivering a speech to summit through video, heurged the SAR to leverage its advantages under "One Country, Two Systems". " Furtherdemonstrating its international characteristics, Hong Kong will continuously deepen and expandexchanges and cooperation with the world in areas such as the economy, technology, andculture," He said. "It will provide greater convenience and better opportunities for moreinternational capital, institutions, and talent to come to Hong Kong for entrepreneurship anddevelopment. "We will, as always, fully support Hong Kong in maintaining its unique status andadvantages over the long term, build a higher-level, more competitive free and open economicenvironment, and create broader space for future development." He also expressed the centralgovernment’s confidence in the SAR’s five-year blueprint to develop Hong Kong. Edited byTony Sabine

- Parking meters down, emergency repairs under way (2026-11-03 02:31)

The Transport Department on Tuesday said that the parking meter system had broken down, with emergency repairs under way. The department said it received a report from the operator at about 8.20am that the system had malfunctioned. It said it instructed the operator to carry out the necessary repairs as soon as possible to minimise the impact on motorists, and to conduct a thorough investigation into the cause of the incident and submit a report. Motorists with enquiries can call the service hotline at 2332 3700. Later, Secretary for Transport and Logistics Mable Chan said several parking metres had returned to normal following the repairs. She added that no parking tickets would be issued until the system was fully restored. "The Transport Department immediately contacted the police. While the system is being repaired, police will not carry out enforcement on roadside parking spots. People can be sure of that," Chan said. "I want to reiterate that we attach huge importance to this incident and the system malfunction. I have instructed the Transport Department to require the system operator, Hong Kong Telecom, to submit a report as soon as possible. I hope an initial report can be submitted within the next 24 hours." _____ Last updated: 2026-11-03 HKT 12:17 Edited by Tony Sabine

- Man arrested over suspected spiked drink (2026-11-03 01:29)

Police have arrested a 61-year-old man suspected of adding an unknown substance to a 33-year-old woman's drink at a bar in Tsim Sha Tsui. Police received a report just before 5am on Sunday that a woman had fallen ill after drinking a beverage at a bar on Mody Road, with suspicions that the drink had been spiked. She was conscious and taken to Queen Elizabeth Hospital for treatment. The Yau Tsim Criminal Investigation Support Team took up the case and made the arrest in Central on Monday. The man is being held for further questioning on suspicion of administering poison with intent to harm. Japanese former adult film star turned

DJ, Mao Hamasaki, has said she fell ill after having a drink that she said had been tampered withduring a Halloween event. Edited by Tony Sabine

- Driver arrested over Tuen Mun fatal accident (2026-11-03 01:26)

A 54-year-old woman died early on Tuesday after reportedly being knocked down by a private car in Tuen Mun, with the driver arrested on suspicion of dangerous driving causing death. The accident happened at about 11.09pm on Monday along Castle Peak Road in Hung Shui Kiu, as the car was travelling towards Yuen Long. The woman suffered serious head injuries and was rushed to Tuen Mun Hospital in an unconscious state, where she was certified dead at 0.17am on Tuesday. The 53-year-old male driver was arrested and is being detained for further enquiries. The case is being investigated by the Special Investigation Team of Traffic, New Territories North. - Foreign firms debut in HK to access mainland market (2026-11-02 14:04)

A number of foreign companies have made their debut at the annual Hong Kong Fintech Week and StartmeupHK that commenced on Monday, hoping to use the SAR as a springboard to tap into the mainland market. They include a Canadian company that produces renewable fuels. Jag Singh from SBI BioEnergy noted that his firm can contribute to the SAR’s green aviation development, and hopes to also explore opportunities in the mainland market. “Everyone in the world has a shortage of sustainable aviation fuel and a target to blend sustainable aviation fuel,” he said. “So we are helping to achieve that and we can do it globally because it's our own process modular, and we have all the control of the technology because we have the hydrogen production as well as the conversion system in them.” Singh went on to say that the firm’s next goal is to expand even further in Asia through Hong Kong. "We hear a lot about the great agreements and structures here and IP protection, and that's very important to us because these are our babies – these are our patented processes – we spent a lot of time and blood, sweat and tears to make this happen," he said. "So I think it’s a perfect gateway or potential base as a springboard to the rest of Asia and China." Canadian firm Deep Sky, which specialises in carbon removal, is also taking part in the event. “What I’ve noticed is there's an incredible density of companies that are developing energy infrastructure in [the] mainland and internationally, financiers financing those projects and trading firms who are trading the products,” the firm's Charlie Renzoni said. “So I see an incredibly important connection between Hong Kong, [the] mainland and the rest of the world.” For Korean firm MoneyStation, which focuses on AI-powered investment intelligence, they decided to make the SAR their first stop to go overseas. “Hong Kong is like a pioneer in adapting the new financial businessmodels like cryptos or stock markets and asset management,” its founder James Lee said. Headded that the city’s annual event also offered them a chance to look for strategic businesspartners. Edited by Aaron Tam

• 'HK crucial for mainland firms' global expansion' (2026-11-02 13:17)

Mainland companies have hailed the city’s annual flagship finance and technology event, saying it offers an opportunity for them to carry out exchanges with potential overseas partners. Speaking on the sidelines of the Hong Kong Fintech Week and StartmeupHK on Monday, Liu Yong from the Zhongguancun Fintech Industry Development said this year was their third time participating in the event. He said that the SAR’s role as a super connector was crucial for the mainland in setting up shop overseas. “Hong Kong can fully leverage its strength in international talent. Because in the international aspects, such as accounting standards, Hong Kong itself is an international financial centre – it has a very good foundation and conditions,” he said. Mu Rong from the Greater Bay Area fintech delegation noted that some firms focusing on securities and asset management, which used to adopt a wait-and-see approach, have gradually set up shop in Hong Kong to start doing business overseas. “Some of these tech companies have started making profits. The orders that they received from overseas customers were even larger than those from the mainland,” she said. “This shows that Hong Kong fully recognised their technical capabilities.” Mu went on to say that firms that wish to expand to international markets will now team up, rather than go it alone. Wang Yu, who represented a delegation led by the Union of Finance Alumni of Peking University said that more than 30 percent of the firms in their group – particularly those focusing on AI – are determined to expand globally via the SAR. Wang highlighted how Hong Kong’s convenience across various aspects, including culture and language, makes it an ideal platform to go global. Edited by Aaron Tam

• Apple iPhone pre-sales linked to 1,700 fraud cases (2026-11-02 10:35)

Police have received more than 1,700 reports of suspected credit-card fraud cases linked to Apple's recent iPhone pre-sales in September and October. At a Southern District Council meeting on Monday, Police Commissioner Joe Chow said the force received 1,589 reports of unauthorised credit card transactions involving the purchases of various Apple iPhone 18 models. Pre-orders for the smartphone began on September 12 in Hong Kong. Another 138 reports were filed in October, when the iPhone Duo began accepting orders. According to Chow, Apple opted against extra security measures for credit card transactions. An example would be the "3D Secure" protocol, which asks customers to enter a one-time password or verify theiridentity on the bank's mobile app. "During this period, we contacted Apple, credit cardcompanies and banks, and cancelled all problematic purchase records. As a result, the victimsdid not suffer any losses," Chow said. The police chief said officers had reached out to Apple onmultiple occasions to express hope that the company would implement effective securitymeasures and strengthen verification in future product launches. Chow also briefed districtcouncillors on Hong Kong's law-and-order situation. He said fraud remained the dominantcrime category, with 34,679 cases in the first nine months of the year, making up 51 percent ofall crimes. Victims reported losses of HK$6.02 billion, a 6.7 per cent increase year on year.Phone scams were now the most common type of fraud, followed by online shoppingdeception. Edited by Raymond Yeung

- Govt pledges 'one-stop liaison service' for homeowners (2026-11-02 09:25)

Deputy Financial Secretary Michael Wong on Monday said liaison officers would be assigned to handle homeowners' enquiries and complaints regarding future building renovation projects. The government announced last week comprehensive reforms to the building maintenance industry to prevent a repeat of the Wang Fuk Court fire that killed 168 people last year. A report detailing the shortcomings by contractors and government departments in relation to the tragedy was released on the same day. Among the measures proposed by the government, the Housing Bureau's Independent Checking Unit (ICU) would be decommissioned and replaced by a Public Housing Building Control Section this month. Project-specific teams would be set up to assist housing estates undertaking major maintenance and renovation works. A liaison officer would act as the point of contact for the owners' corporation and homeowners. Wong, who attended a Legislative Council housing panel meeting as Acting Secretary for Housing, said the liaison officers will keep homeowners informed of developments. "Currently, the ICU has different professional functions. It may not be practical for homeowners to find the person in charge of each field," he said. "We have internal referrals now, but it's neither direct nor fast enough. In the future, the one-stop liaison officer would handle all these issues, as well as complaints concerning maintenance matters." Wong added that authorities also planned to use artificial intelligence to speed things up, such as auditing and analysing documents. "It's impractical for one person to go through 1,000 documents, while artificial intelligence can finish that in 0.1 seconds," he said. "It will flag anomalies and anything improper, but will not make the final judgment. We will always have people to make the judgment." Wong said any potential issue flagged by AI will be followed up manually. Edited by Raymond Yeung

- 30pc of financial firms now employ agentic AI: survey (2026-11-02 08:05)

The Securities and Futures Commission has released its first-ever AI readiness survey, showing that most large financial firms in Hong Kong already use artificial intelligence across their operations, with adoption expected to accelerate over the coming year. The survey, conducted between July and August this year, covered 20 large financial firms with 78 affiliated licensed corporations in Hong Kong. Together they accounted for over 75 per cent of securities transactions reported by licensed corporations in the six months ended June. The survey foundthat 95 per cent of surveyed firms expected AI usage to accelerate over the next 12 months,with 90 per cent already connecting AI tools to internal systems. AI use now spans front-,middle- and back-office activities. "AI adoption in Hong Kong in the capital market is growingrapidly in speed and in scale," SFC chief executive officer Julia Leung said during the Hong KongFintech Week. Notably, agentic AI – which can autonomously determine and execute steps toachieve an objective – is gaining traction, the survey showed. Thirty per cent of surveyed firmsalready use it in their business operations, and 25 per cent are piloting it with varying degreesof autonomy and human involvement. However, Leung struck a note of caution. "Just think ofagentic AI [as] your kids at home. They define the boundaries we set for them. They can gorogue, they can collude with their siblings, and disrupt your neighbour," she said. Leung alsoacknowledged that the development of frontier AI models and agents has outpacedgovernments' and regulators' ability to set rules. The SFC said the findings will inform itssupervisory approach to AI, with priorities including protecting investors, strengtheningcybersecurity and operational resilience, and ensuring effective AI governance. - HSBC to set up AI institute in race to train staff (2026-11-02 06:21)

Banking giant HSBC says an artificial intelligence and emerging technology institute being set up in Hong Kong is due to become operational in the first quarter of 2027. Announcing the update at Hong Kong Fintech Week on Monday, chief executive Georges Elhedery said the city's biggest lender aims to move the institute to the Northern Metropolis once a suitable location has been identified. For now, he said the Hong Kong University of Science and Technology will be the institute’s first anchor academic partner. "We bring their skills and know-how and capabilities as well as our domain expertise and financial services to find and work on solutions that make our clients' lives much easier in the age of AI, but also other emerging technologies such as blockchain, quantum, etc," Elhedery said. He framed the institute's establishment as part of HSBC's broader AI strategy to give its roughly 200,000 employees – including about 28,000 in Hong Kong – an efficiency boost. "AI is going to be disruptive. It’s going to transform jobs. It’s going to eliminate some. It’s going to create new ones," Elhedery said. "The first mission for us is to bring all our colleagues ⋯ on the journey with us as opposed to creating an environment where uncertainty actually prevails." HSBC is already testing how client agents could interact with the bank’s agents to handle basic tasks, he said, though security remains a major workstream. On AI security, Elhedery said, HSBC is constantly working to identify vulnerabilities and build more resilient systems. Edited by Raymond Yeung

- HKMA eyes next level for Fintech 2030 with AI push (2026-11-02 04:14)

The Hong Kong Monetary Authority has set out the next phase of its Fintech 2030 strategy, which will pair new technology initiatives with a renewed emphasis on governance and risk management. Speaking at Hong Kong Fintech Week on Monday, authority chief executive Eddie Yue said the HKMA is launching Project Sage to examine the application and governance of " agentic finance" – artificial intelligence systems that can execute tasks on behalf of users. " Themain purpose of the Sage project is to hope that, under agentic finance, we can both promoteapplication and pay attention to governance," he said. Yue said a cross-sector expert panelwould bring together finance, payments, professional services, technology and academicrepresentatives to explore use cases, sandbox testing, interoperability standards andgovernance safeguards. The HKMA is also issuing a discussion paper on banks' use of agenticAI, seeking views on governance models, responsibility arrangements and a possible centralregister of trusted agents. Yue said the aim is to set rules that allow innovation while managingrisks. He also said the authority would launch a post-quantum cryptography toolbox with theHong Kong University of Science and Technology to help banks prepare for the challengesstemming from breakthroughs in quantum computing. On tokenisation, Yue said the HKMA isintroducing tokenised central bank money to enable 24/7 settlement of interbank tokeniseddeposits and would expand the number of participating banks to support cross-lender transfersaround the clock. "The benefit is that, for example, quite a number of enterprises with globalliquidity to manage can, if round-the-clock tokenised deposit transfers are achieved, makepayments at any time and anywhere, across different accounts and even cross-border," he said. "And for retail investors, if in the future they want to invest in different retail tokenised financialproducts, they can also more flexibly do their investments 24/7, strengthening the flexibility andsecurity of their asset allocation." Yue said the HKMA would further pilot tokenised ExchangeFund Bills in the secondary market and explore whether regulated stablecoins could serve as apayment channel. He stressed that innovation must be matched by governance and riskmanagement so it can go further, land better and benefit more people. Edited by Tony Sabine

- HK 'an ideal home for international private law body' (2026-11-02 03:54)

Chief Executive John Lee on Monday said Hong Kong strives to attract global organisations and promote international legal cooperation. He made the remarks in an opening ceremony by the International Institute for the Unification of Private Law – also known as Institut International Pour L'unification du Droit Prive (Unidroit) – of its Asia-Pacific liaison office in the city. At the ceremony, which also marks the beginning of this year's Hong Kong Legal Week, Lee said the establishment of the office would deepen collaboration, facilitating the implementation of private law. "It is a decision of profound significance – for Unidroit, for Hong Kong and for the entire Asia-Pacific region," he said. "The liaison office will serve as a focal point for enhanced engagement with member states and stakeholders in the region. And it will play a crucial role in the legislative and institutional work of Unidroit. "Hong Kong, strategically located at the heart of Asia, is an ideal home for the Asia-Pacific liaison office." Lee said the establishment of the liaison office would strengthen the collaborative relationship between Hong Kong and the institute. The office would also be able to benefit from cooperation with other legal organisations in the city, he added. Hong Kong, Lee pointed out, is a renowned international legal, trade and financial hub and serves as a host to many international organisations. The city's laws and dispute resolution framework also align with international standards and have been recognised globally, he stressed. The nation's 15th Five-Year Plan supports Hong Kong’ sdevelopment as an international legal and dispute resolution services centre, Lee said, while thecity’ s own five-year blueprint sets out a series of measures for leveraging the strengths of theSAR’ s common law system. - John Lee says HK offers businesses long-term certainty (2026-11-02 03:11)

Chief Executive John Lee said Hong Kong offers businesses the "certainty" they need to innovate, invest and flourish over the long term, even as global uncertainty persists. That assurance came in opening remarks that he made on the first day of the region's annual flagship finance and technology event, Hong Kong Fintech Week and StartmeupHK, on Monday. The conference brings together some 1,000 government leaders and fintech, finance and technology professionals from more than 100 countries and economies, along with around 800 exhibitors and startups and more than 30 delegations from the mainland and abroad. Lee framed the event against a fast-changing global backdrop, saying technology is advancing at a remarkable speed, with artificial intelligence transforming industries and forcing businesses worldwide to adjust to shifting market conditions and unprecedented technological changes. "In such an ever-changing, all-encompassing environment, one quality is becoming even more valuable — I'm talking about certainty," he said. "Certainty about direction, certainty about opportunities, certainty about where businesses can invest, innovate and flourish in the long term." Lee pointed to Hong Kong’ s first-ever five-year plan, saying the strategic blueprint reinforces the city’ s status as an international financial, maritime and trade centre and aviation hub, while accelerating its development as an international innovation and technology centre and a hub for high-calibre talent. He also cited Hong Kong’ s ranking as the world’ s freest economy, its more than 1,400 fintech companies and InvestHK’ s support for more than 550 overseas and mainland companies in the first nine months of the year, generating about US$9 billion in foreign direct investment and some 11,100 jobs. He also pointed to the Northern Metropolis as a long-term source of opportunity, saying the mega project would create an innovation "through-train" that connects talent and research with commercialisation, capital and global markets. Lee expressed confidence that Hong Kong’ s future would be one for everyone – in business, finance, technology and beyond. "If you believe that technology will define the future, if you believe that Asia will continue to drive global economic growth, and if you believe in the transformation taking place across China, then you must believe in Hong Kong's pivotal place in making it happen," he said. "After all, it's in Hong Kong that you access global capital while remaining close to one of the world's most dynamic engines of innovation and growth." He added that Hong Kong is a place where ideas can move from research to commercialisation and then into global markets – an East-meets-West city built on multilateralism, free trade and mutual opportunity. - ICAC charges two ex-cleaning firm executives (2026-11-02 03:04)

Two former senior executives of a cleaning company have been charged by the ICAC for allegedly accepting bribes totalling more than HK$75 million in connection with the procurement of cleaning vehicles and maintenance services, with the case expected to bementioned at Kwun Tong Magistrates' Courts on Monday. William Fung, 54, former director ofJohnson Cleaning Services Company Limited and chief executive officer of its parent company,and Jimmy Lee, 57, former general manager of Johnson, were both charged on October 30 withone count of conspiracy for an agent to accept advantages under the Prevention of BriberyOrdinance and the Crimes Ordinance. At the time of the alleged offences, Fung oversawJohnson's business including subcontracts, purchase orders and the release of payments. Leewas under his direct supervision. Between November 2024 and January 2026, Johnson procuredmultiple fleets of cleaning vehicles from a supplier and regularly used the supplier's vehiclemaintenance services, with total expenses exceeding HK$160 million. The charge alleges thatFung and Lee conspired to accept bribes totalling over HK$75 million from individuals includingthe supplier's proprietor, as a reward for showing favour to the supplier in the company'sbusiness dealings. The ICAC said Johnson had rendered full assistance during its investigation.As the corruption investigation is ongoing, the commission said it would not rule out furtherprosecution. - Hong Kong records warmest October since records begin (2026-11-01 10:27)

The Observatory on Sunday said Hong Kong recorded its warmest October since records began in 1884. The forecaster said the average temperature last month stood at 27.6 degrees Celsius. The mean maximum and minimum temperatures also set records, at 30.5 degrees and 25.8 degrees respectively. The Observatory attributed the unusually warm conditions to the ongoing El Niño and a weak northeast monsoon, while noting that climate change also played a role. A fresh to strong northeast monsoon is expected to reach the city in the coming days, bringing a slight drop in temperatures early next week. Edited by Aaron Tam

- Bar Association backs criminalising bid-rigging (2026-11-01 09:45)

The Bar Association on Sunday said it supports the criminalisation of bid-rigging activities through amendments to the Competition Ordinance. This came as its task force on law review proposed about 50 legislative amendments following the deadly Wang Fuk Court fire. It covered bid-rigging, tender specifications, declaration of interests, as well as project safety and risks. Jose-Antonio Maurellet, chairman of the association, expressed support of criminalising bid-rigging in parallel to the existing civil regime. “The existence of the dual-track system, of course, does not mean that civil and criminal proceedings would be taken forward at the same time for the same case – this would contravene the principle against double jeopardy,” he said. “The enforcement authorities concerned will therefore need to coordinate with one another and to decide whether a case is to be dealt with by civil enforcement or by criminal prosecution.” He went on to say that under the new criminal offence, the elements of crime,such as the definition of bid-rigging and the burden of proof, must be clearly defined. Theassociation also proposed to amend the Building Management Ordinance, saying if a projectexceeds a certain value, tenders must be submitted in “two envelopes” – one for thetechnical proposal and the other for price. The price proposal may only be opened after thetechnical proposal has met a minimum score specified in the evaluation to encourage a focuson quality, it said. Edited by Aaron Tam

• Lan Kwai Fong welcomes record 105k Halloween revellers (2026-11-01 09:35)

Lan Kwai Fong Group on Sunday said it welcomed a record 105,000 revellers on Halloween, up from 80,000 a year earlier, as bars and restaurants saw business nearly double. The group's chairman, Allan Zeman said the size of the crowd on Saturday – also the final day of Hong Kong's inaugural month-long programme for the spooky festival – was the busiest Halloween the entertainment district had ever seen. "The first Saturday that it came out, it was busy, the second Saturday, more people came, and then the third Saturday was really quite busy but not as busy as last Saturday night," he said. “It was a record because last year we had 80,000 people and never expected to break the record.” He lauded the Tourism Board’s Halloween Month, saying it was a draw for visitors from across Hong Kong, the mainland and overseas. " The beauty was there was people from all over," Zeman said. Locals made up roughly 50 to 60 percent of the crowd and mainland visitors stood at about 20 to 30 percent, with Zeman saying there were more tourists from around the world as well. "In the past we never had so many international people," he said, adding that visitors told him they had come from Canada and the United States specifically to experience Lan Kwai Fong. Zeman also said bars and restaurants did 90 to 100 percent more business than on a normal Saturday, while other businesses reported gains of 40 to 50 percent. "It was just the best Halloween that Lan Kwai Fong has ever seen," he said. The Lan Kwai Fong Group chairman also said the opening of the round-the-clock Huanggang Port and extended clearance hours at Shenzhen Bay control point made a difference. It’s a "game changer for Hong Kong – not just for Halloween", he said, citing facial recognition that can clear travellers in about two minutes. Edited by Aaron Tam

• HK Q3 growth set to beat forecasts: FS (2026-11-01 08:18)

Hong Kong’s economy is expected to grow faster than market forecasts in Q3, extending its positive growth streak to 15 consecutive quarters, according to Financial Secretary Paul Chan. In his weekly blog on Sunday, Chan said the government will release advance estimates for third-quarter GDP on Tuesday. Preliminary indications suggest that faster export growth and solid domestic demand will push year-on-year growth above market expectations and accelerate from the second quarter. "For the first three quarters combined, real GDP growth year-on-year will be the highest for the same period in five years," he said. "With the economy maintaining good momentum, the full-year economic growth forecast is expected to be revised upward again." Chan attributed part of the growth to technological innovation, noting that the global artificial intelligence investment boom continues to drive strong demand for high-end electronic components and AI-related goods. "The value of Hong Kong’ s merchandise exportssurged by 64.9 percent year-on-year in September, recording double-digit growth for the 20thconsecutive month, with the monthly increase hitting a more than 40-year high," he said. "Among these, exports of 'office machines and automatic data processing machines' soared by183.7 percent." Private investment expenditure has also grown by double digits for threestraight quarters and maintained that momentum into the third quarter, Chan said, reflectingcorporate confidence in the outlook. Service exports have benefited from continued growth ininbound tourism, buoyant cross-boundary transport and an active financial market. Chan saidupcoming retail and catering receipts figures are expected to continue showing moderategrowth. He also noted that two major international financial events – Hong Kong Fintech Weekand the Global Financial Leaders’ Investment Summit – will begin on Monday. Fintech industryplayers and investors from more than 100 economies, as well as heads of top internationalfinancial institutions, will gather in Hong Kong to discuss key issues in global financial marketsand technological development and to identify and create new investment opportunitiesthrough high-level exchanges. - Runners unfazed by heat in first-ever NM marathon (2026-11-01 08:06)

Around 15,000 people took part in the inaugural Northern Metropolis Marathon on Sunday morning, with the organiser saying it will try to hold future races in cooler months and extend the route to Shenzhen. At the sound of the horn, eager runners began their 42.1km journey at 6:30am in Shek Mun, where the Heung Yee Kuk – which organised the event – is headquartered. Full marathoners then headed north via the Science Park, Tolo Highway, Lam Tsuen River in Tai Po and the Lung Shan Tunnel before crossing the line at the recently commissioned Fanling Bypass. Half-marathon runners had a similar route, starting at the Science Park and finishing in Fanling. Most participants said the arrangements were smooth. But depending on their luck, some might have had to briefly stop at the traffic lights at a crossing to let cars pass. A certain section of the route also saw runners sharing a bike path with cyclists. Lai, a marathon finisher, said he was not pleased with his time of three hours and 11 minutes. "I kind of expected it, because of the heat," he said. "To me the route didn't matter. Running in 28 degrees [Celsius] was really tough, and there was a lack of water stations. There should be one station every 2.5 kilometres, compared to every three to four kilometres right now." Former SAR representative Chan Ka-ho, meanwhile, came fourth overall in the men's marathon. "There aren't that many full marathon courses in Hong Kong, perhaps only three or four. So this new course offers a fresh experience," he said. "If you ask me if the route is fast, I would say no. But for recreational runners who wish to step onto the Fanling Bypass and Lung Shan Tunnel, then it's quite nice." To promote local produce and delicacies, each finisher was given a hydroponic cabbage as well as pastries. Heung Yee Kuk chairman Kenneth Lau said he was surprised by the turnout. He hoped that the route allowed participants to experience the charm of the New Territories, and thanked authorities for providing help to overcome various challenges. "Many people have asked, if they can run all the way to Shenzhen... We can see that infrastructure development in Yuen Long and the rest of the Northern Metropolis is in full swing, with numerous construction sites and projects under way," he said. "I believe that in the future, the route will surely extendto San Tin, the Lok Ma Chau Loop, or even all the way into the Shenzhen area." Lau admitted theday's temperature of 25 degrees Celsius or so was not the most ideal for running, and hoped tohold future races in December if possible. Edited by Aaron Tam

- 'Revolutionary change aimed for building maintenance' (2026-11-01 05:15)

Secretary for Justice Paul Lam on Sunday said the government’s efforts to amend the law following the deadly Wang Fuk Court inferno aim to make a "revolutionary change" to the entire building maintenance ecosystem in Hong Kong. His remarks came as authorities plan to submit legislative amendments to the Legislative Council within this year to reform the building maintenance and renovation system, as well as combat bid-rigging activities. Speaking on a Commercial Radio programme, Lam said dishonest contractors should be driven out of the market. “In today’s large-scale building maintenance, there is an objective fact – an unfortunate and unacceptable fact – that the 'fat of the meat' is too rich, and the market was almost monopolised by bad actors,” he said. "A friend of mine in law enforcement put it very well: bad money drives out good. Genuinely decent maintenance workers and professionals were not willing to take part in the market. People have no choice – it’s all bad actors. "So the first step is to drive the bad actors out of the market, so that the highly professional and honest people will be willing to re-enter the market." Lam said authorities should also assist home owners in finding suitable contractors and professionals, and ensure that construction works are carried out in a safe and lawful manner. Speaking on the same show, Secretary for Commerce and Economic Development Algernon Yau said bid-rigging involves complex issues including price-fixing and market sharing. He believes criminalising such activities would enable greater powers to combat bid-rigging, expressing hope that the amendments could be passed by April next year. Edited by Tony Sabine
