Executive Summary

Indonesia navigated a complex security landscape between May 21 and May 28, 2026, marked by a significant cyberattack, active diplomatic engagements, and ongoing defense modernization efforts. A major cyber intrusion targeted PT Bank Negara Indonesia (BNI), exposing systemic vulnerabilities in the financial sector and underscoring the escalating digital threats facing the nation. Diplomatically, Indonesia maintained its "bebas-aktif" foreign policy, suspending involvement in a US-led peace initiative while simultaneously strengthening economic ties with Russia through a ratified free trade agreement and intensifying cooperation with China. The country also continued to bolster its defense capabilities with the reception of new French-made Rafale fighter jets, signaling a commitment to deterrence amidst regional uncertainties. These developments highlight Indonesia's strategic balancing act between major global powers and the critical need to enhance cybersecurity resilience.

Key Security Developments

- Major Cyberattack on State Bank (BNI)

On May 22, 2026, PT Bank Negara Indonesia (BNI), one of Indonesia's largest state-owned banks, was hit by a significant cyber intrusion attributed to the TripleX threat actor group. This attack reportedly compromised approximately 2 terabytes of sensitive data, including customer records, personal identification details, and financial transaction histories from 2024 to 2026. The incident exposes critical vulnerabilities within Southeast Asia's financial infrastructure and poses a substantial risk of identity theft and fraud for millions of customers.

- Suspension from "Trump's Board of Peace"

Indonesia announced on May 21, 2026, its suspension from "Trump's Board of Peace," a US-led initiative. This decision followed domestic criticism that participation contradicted Indonesia's "bebas-aktif" (free and active) foreign policy, particularly given the inclusion of Israel, with whom Indonesia has no formal diplomatic relations, and concerns over the framework's credibility regarding Gaza. Indonesia had previously pledged 8,000 troops for non-combat stabilization around Rafah, the largest single national contribution to the proposed force.

- Ratification of Indonesia-EAEU Free Trade Agreement

On May 26, 2026, Russian President Vladimir Putin signed the ratification act for the Free Trade Agreement between the Eurasian Economic Union (EAEU) and Indonesia. This agreement, initially signed in December 2025, is set to unlock wider market access for over 98% of Indonesian products within the EAEU, including palm oil, coffee, and textiles, significantly strengthening economic ties with Russia, Armenia, Belarus, Kazakhstan, and Kyrgyzstan.

- Intensified Diplomatic Cooperation with China

Chinese Foreign Minister Wang Yi met with Indonesian Foreign Minister Sugiono on May 26, 2026, on the sidelines of a UN Security Council meeting in New York. Both sides agreed to intensify high-level exchanges, strengthen multilateral collaboration, and deepen pragmatic cooperation across various fields, including energy, mineral resources, and maritime development. This reflects a commitment to a comprehensive strategic partnership amidst global geopolitical shifts.

- Acquisition of French Rafale Fighter Jets

On May 18, 2026, Indonesia officially received a batch of newly acquired defense equipment from France at Halim Perdanakusuma Air Force Base in Jakarta. The delivery included six Rafale fighter jets, six Dassault Falcon 8X aircraft, and two Airbus A400M Atlas transport planes. President Prabowo Subianto emphasized that this acquisition is crucial for strengthening Indonesia's defense capabilities and serving as a deterrent in an uncertain global geopolitical landscape.

- New Commodity Export Policy

On May 22, 2026, President Prabowo Subianto announced an overhaul of Indonesia's trade policies for key commodities, including coal, palm oil, and iron alloys. A newly established state-owned enterprise is mandated to handle these exports by September, aiming to increase tax revenues and combat under-invoicing. This policy shift is expected to have significant global implications, particularly for China, Indonesia's largest trading partner.

- Warning Against Strategic Waterway Confrontation

Indonesian Foreign Minister Sugiono, on May 28, 2026, cautioned against international strategic shipping lanes becoming arenas for confrontation or political bargaining. Speaking at a UN Security Council high-level debate, he called for greater respect for international law, including the United Nations Convention on the Law of the Sea (UNCLOS), amid rising geopolitical tensions and concerns over global maritime security.

- Indonesia as a Cyber Scam Hub

Reports from May 18, 2026, indicated that Indonesia is emerging as a new hub for cyber scam operations and illegal online gambling, following crackdowns in neighboring countries. Over 550 suspects, predominantly foreign nationals, were detained in raids across Batam, Jakarta, and Bali this month, highlighting a growing internal security challenge related to transnational organized crime exploiting visa-free policies.

- Consideration of US Overflight Access

Indonesia's foreign ministry confirmed on April 15, 2026, that it is considering a US proposal for "blanket" overflight access for military aircraft through Indonesian airspace. While a "Major Defense Cooperation Partnership" was signed with the US on April 13, 2026, Jakarta is treating the overflight proposal with caution to ensure it does not entangle the country in potential South China Sea conflicts or compromise its sovereignty.

- Drafting Rules for Russian Oil Imports

As of May 25, 2026, Indonesia is preparing additional regulations to allow public service agencies, including state-owned energy company Pertamina, to import oil directly from Russia. This move follows an oil purchase agreement made during President Prabowo Subianto's visit to Moscow last month, despite Western sanctions on Russia, necessitating a special mechanism due to Pertamina's international business obligations.

Geopolitical Impact and Regional Dynamics

Indonesia's recent security and diplomatic activities underscore its commitment to a "bebas-aktif" (free and active) foreign policy, navigating complex relationships with major global powers. The decision to suspend involvement in "Trump's Board of Peace" on May 21, 2026, despite a significant troop pledge, demonstrates Jakarta's sensitivity to domestic and broader Muslim world sentiment, particularly concerning the Israeli-Palestinian conflict. This move, while potentially straining relations with Washington, aims to preserve Indonesia's credibility as an independent broker. Simultaneously, Indonesia is deepening its engagement with both the United States and China, reflecting a pragmatic approach to securing its national interests amidst intensifying US-China rivalry.

The ratification of the Free Trade Agreement with the Eurasian Economic Union (EAEU) on May 26, 2026, and the ongoing efforts to draft regulations for direct Russian oil imports, signal Indonesia's intent to diversify its economic and strategic partnerships. This engagement with Russia, despite Western sanctions, highlights Indonesia's pursuit of energy security and expanded trade opportunities, positioning Russia as a strategic partner in the Eurasian region. Concurrently, high-level diplomatic meetings with China, such as the one between Foreign Ministers Wang Yi and Sugiono on May 26, 2026, emphasize strengthening economic and maritime cooperation, crucial given China's role as Indonesia's largest trading partner and investor.

Regionally, Indonesia's emphasis on maritime security and its call for respect for international law in strategic shipping lanes on May 28, 2026, are critical for stability in the South China Sea and other vital waterways. While Indonesia is not a direct claimant in the South China Sea disputes, Chinese maritime pressure near the Natuna Islands has tested its exclusive economic zone. The ongoing consideration of a US request for "blanket overflight access" for military aircraft, following a major defense cooperation partnership signed in April 2026, illustrates Indonesia's careful balancing act to enhance its defense capabilities without being drawn into great power confrontations. This delicate diplomacy aims to reinforce ASEAN centrality and maintain regional peace.

Military and Defense Analysis

Indonesia's military and defense posture during this period reflects a clear strategy of modernization and deterrence, driven by an uncertain global geopolitical landscape. The reception of six Rafale fighter jets, six Dassault Falcon 8X aircraft, and two Airbus A400M Atlas transport planes on May 18, 2026, at Halim Perdanakusuma Air Force Base in Jakarta, marks a significant upgrade to the Indonesian Air Force's capabilities. These acquisitions are part of a larger deal to purchase 42 Rafale fighters, demonstrating a substantial investment in advanced combat platforms to safeguard national sovereignty and honor. President Prabowo Subianto explicitly stated that these enhancements are for deterrence and protection of national territory, not for aggression.

The Indonesian Navy is also undergoing modernization, as evidenced by the maiden voyage of the KRI Prabu Siliwangi, one of two Italian-built Brawijaya-class multirole frigates, which completed its journey from Italy to Indonesia in late March 2026. This vessel, along with its sister ship, enhances Indonesia's maritime security and power projection capabilities, with its itinerary including port calls in Africa to broaden maritime partnerships beyond the Indo-Pacific. Furthermore, Indonesia's participation in international military exercises, such as the Kakadu 2026 in Australia and the annual Super Garuda Shield with the US and other nations, underscores its commitment to enhancing interoperability and collective security in the Indo-Pacific.

Defense spending trends indicate a sustained effort to modernize Indonesia's aging military assets, a priority for President Prabowo since taking office in 2024. The government views the strengthening of defense equipment as a strategic investment for national defense readiness. While specific figures for the reporting period are not available, the scale of recent acquisitions and planned exercises suggests a continued upward trend in defense expenditure. The focus on acquiring sophisticated asymmetric capabilities and next-generation defense technologies, particularly in maritime, subsurface, and autonomous systems, as outlined in the Major Defense Cooperation Partnership with the US, highlights a strategic shift towards advanced and diversified defense capabilities.

Outlook and Forecast

Short-term trends (1-3 months) for Indonesia's security posture will likely see continued diplomatic maneuvering to balance relations with major powers. The fallout from suspending involvement in the "Board of Peace" may lead to subtle shifts in US-Indonesia engagement, while the newly ratified EAEU FTA and ongoing discussions for Russian oil imports will solidify Indonesia's multi-vector foreign policy. Domestically, the investigation and remediation efforts following the BNI cyberattack will be a top priority, potentially leading to increased scrutiny and investment in cybersecurity infrastructure across critical sectors. The government's new commodity export policy will also begin to take shape, with its initial implementation in September likely to draw close attention from international trading partners, particularly China.

Critical flashpoints and risk areas include the persistent threat of sophisticated cyberattacks targeting critical infrastructure and financial institutions, as demonstrated by the BNI breach. The North Natuna Sea remains a potential flashpoint due to ongoing Chinese maritime activities, requiring Indonesia to maintain a vigilant maritime security presence. The broader geopolitical competition in the Indo-Pacific, particularly regarding the South China Sea and the US request for overflight access, presents a delicate diplomatic challenge for Indonesia to uphold its sovereignty and non-aligned stance without alienating key partners. Furthermore, the emergence of Indonesia as a hub for cyber scam operations poses an internal security risk that could impact international relations and public trust.

Indicators to monitor include the progress of the BNI cyberattack investigation and the implementation of enhanced cybersecurity measures across Indonesia's financial and government sectors. Observing the practical implications and international reactions to Indonesia's new commodity export policy will be crucial for understanding its economic and geopolitical impact. Further developments regarding the US overflight access proposal, including any public statements or policy decisions from Jakarta, will indicate the trajectory of Indonesia-US defense cooperation. Additionally, monitoring the frequency and nature of maritime incidents in Indonesia's Exclusive Economic Zone, particularly in the North Natuna Sea, will be important for assessing regional stability.

Strategic recommendations for Indonesia include prioritizing the development of a robust national cybersecurity framework and investing heavily in cyber defense capabilities, including threat intelligence sharing and incident response mechanisms, to protect critical infrastructure from evolving threats. Diplomatically, Indonesia should continue to articulate and consistently apply its "bebas-aktif" foreign policy, ensuring that engagements with all major powers serve its national interests without compromising its strategic autonomy. Strengthening regional maritime security cooperation with ASEAN partners, through joint patrols and information sharing, is vital to address challenges in strategic waterways. Internally, a concerted effort is needed to dismantle cyber scam networks, including enhanced law enforcement cooperation with international partners and stricter enforcement of immigration policies to prevent the exploitation of visa regulations.
