Executive Summary

Indonesia has demonstrated a proactive and multi-aligned approach to its security posture during the period of May 23-30, 2026, characterized by significant defense modernization efforts and intensified diplomatic engagements. The nation continued to bolster its military capabilities with recent acquisitions of French-made Rafale fighter jets and other aircraft, underscoring a commitment to deterrence amidst global geopolitical uncertainties. Concurrently, Indonesia deepened its security cooperation with key partners like the United States through the Major Defense Cooperation Partnership (MDCP) and Japan, while maintaining its "free and active" foreign policy to balance relations with major powers. Maritime security remained a critical focus, with ongoing patrols and a strong push for a Code of Conduct in the South China Sea, alongside growing concerns over the vulnerability of undersea digital infrastructure. Furthermore, Indonesia actively addressed emerging threats through robust cybersecurity initiatives, including hosting major conferences and cracking down on transnational cybercrime operations.

Key Security Developments

- Defense Acquisitions and Arms Deals

On May 18, 2026, Indonesian President Prabowo Subianto presided over a handover ceremony in Jakarta, inspecting recently acquired defense equipment from France. This included six Rafale fighter jets, six Dassault Falcon 8X aircraft, and two Airbus A400M Atlas transport planes, reinforcing Indonesia's commitment to strengthening its defense capabilities for deterrence. These acquisitions are part of an US$8.1 billion deal signed in 2022 for 42 Rafale fighters, with the first batch delivered in January and additional jets handed over in this period.

- Defense Policy and Strategic Shifts

Indonesia's signing of the Major Defense Cooperation Partnership (MDCP) with the United States in April 2026 marked a crucial development in Indo-Pacific security dynamics, signaling a strategic paradigm shift from its traditional non-aligned "bebas aktif" doctrine. This partnership focuses on underwater domain awareness, asymmetric warfare capabilities, and modernizing the Indonesian Air Force fleet, while also providing greater access to US military education and training.

- Diplomatic Relations

President Prabowo Subianto concluded a state visit to France from May 27-29, 2026, resulting in four new commercial agreements totaling US$3.5 billion. These partnerships, finalized alongside the launch of the France-Indonesia High-Level Business Council in Paris on May 28, 2026, focus on energy resilience, trade, and defense. Additionally, on May 27, 2026, Indonesia and Tajikistan deepened cooperation across key sectors during a bilateral consultation meeting in Dushanbe, reaffirming commitment to advancing concrete bilateral cooperation and strengthening ASEAN-Central Asia connectivity. On May 30, 2026, US Secretary of Defense Pete Hegseth praised Indonesia, among other regional allies, at the Shangri-La Dialogue in Singapore for stepping up defense spending and improving capabilities.

- Maritime and Border Security

The Indonesian Maritime Security Agency (Bakamla) continued to intensify sea patrols to maintain maritime security and safety, conducting independent patrols throughout the year and collaborative patrols with domestic agencies and fellow ASEAN countries. Indonesia also actively pushed for the completion and signing of the Code of Conduct (CoC) for the South China Sea this year, with Foreign Minister Sugiono expressing hope to avoid further delays in negotiations. Concerns were highlighted regarding the vulnerability of undersea fiber-optic cables in strategic chokepoints like the Malacca and Makassar Straits, with Indonesia positioning itself to leverage its legal certainty and licensing governance as a geopolitical instrument for digital infrastructure.

- Cybersecurity

Indonesia hosted several significant cybersecurity conferences during this period, including the International Conference on Cybersecurity Frameworks and IT System Integrity in Bali on May 28, 2026, and the International Conference on Blockchain and Cybersecurity Risk Assessment in Big Data in Jakarta Raya on May 23, 2026. These events, along with CyberX Indonesia 2026, aim to foster collaboration among government, industry, and technology sectors to counter emerging cyber threats and strengthen digital resilience. In a direct security incident, Indonesia deported four Kenyan nationals on May 29, 2026, who were rescued from an alleged online scam compound in Bali, highlighting ongoing efforts to crack down on transnational cybercrime syndicates and human trafficking.

- Counter-terrorism

A renewed plan to include the Indonesian Military (TNI) in the country's fight against terrorism has sparked concerns among civil society groups, who warn it could undermine democratic reforms and civil liberties. A draft presidential regulation outlines three roles for the armed forces in counterterrorism: prevention, enforcement, and recovery, with potential deployment in cases of "high-level threats". Indonesia continues to apply sustained pressure on terrorist groups and promotes a "soft approach" to countering violent extremism.

- Military Activities and Exercises

On May 23, 2026, the Commander of the Indonesian National Armed Forces (TNI) General Agus Subiyanto officially dispatched 744 soldiers of the Garuda Contingent Task Force to join the United Nations Interim Force in Lebanon (UNIFIL). This deployment underscores Indonesia's continued commitment to international peacekeeping operations. Additionally, "Exercise Bell Buoy" was mentioned as boosting collective maritime security capabilities on May 25, 2026, indicating ongoing regional military cooperation.

Geopolitical Impact and Regional Dynamics

Indonesia's security developments from May 23-30, 2026, underscore its evolving role as a significant player in regional stability and global power dynamics. The Major Defense Cooperation Partnership (MDCP) with the United States, signed in April 2026, represents a notable pivot from Indonesia's long-standing "bebas aktif" (free and active) foreign policy, which traditionally avoided alignment with major blocs. While this partnership aims to enhance Indonesia's military modernization and maritime security capabilities, it also introduces complexities in its relations with China, which views such alignments with suspicion. Indonesia's ability to secure Russian crude oil at a discount, seemingly facilitated by the MDCP acting as a "diplomatic shield" against US sanctions, exemplifies its "multi-alignment" doctrine designed to protect national interests amidst global energy crises and major power competition.

The ongoing efforts to finalize a Code of Conduct (CoC) for the South China Sea are crucial for regional stability, particularly as tensions persist between China and other claimant states. Indonesia, as a non-claimant state in the Spratly and Paracel archipelagos but facing Chinese intrusions into its Exclusive Economic Zone around the Natuna Islands, plays a vital mediating role. The push for a legally binding CoC by year-end, as expressed by Foreign Minister Sugiono, reflects a desire to manage behavior, reduce miscalculation, and prevent escalation in this contested waterway. However, the Philippines' insistence on incorporating the 2016 arbitral ruling into the CoC has been assessed by Chinese analysts as structurally non-viable, posing a challenge to timely resolution.

Indonesia's active diplomacy, including President Prabowo's visit to France and cooperation with Tajikistan, demonstrates its commitment to diversifying partnerships and strengthening its influence beyond traditional regional concerns. The focus on energy resilience, trade, and defense in agreements with France, and strengthening ASEAN-Central Asia connectivity through Tajikistan, highlights Indonesia's strategic foresight in navigating a complex global landscape marked by technological and economic competition. However, Indonesia's recent announcement on May 20, 2026, to take direct state control over exports of palm oil, thermal coal, and nickel products, described as a "sweeping and sudden assertion of power," has shaken investor confidence and could impact regional economic dynamics.

Military and Defense Analysis

Indonesia's military and defense posture during this period reflects a clear commitment to modernization and enhancing its capabilities, driven by a recognition of global geopolitical uncertainty. The recent acquisition and handover of six Rafale fighter jets, six Dassault Falcon 8X aircraft, and two Airbus A400M Atlas transport planes from France are central to this modernization program, significantly boosting the Indonesian Air Force's air defense and transport capabilities. President Prabowo Subianto emphasized that this strengthening is purely for defense and deterrence, not aggression, aiming to secure Indonesia's airspace, seas, and land. The Ministry of Defense's purchase of 42 Rafale jets from Dassault Aviation is a multi-phase contract, with the third phase for the final 18 aircraft now in effect, indicating a sustained investment in advanced military hardware.

Beyond air assets, Indonesia is also progressing in its naval capabilities, with the country entering the pre-production stage for Scorpene Evolved submarines. This development is crucial for enhancing Indonesia's underwater domain awareness and maritime security in its vast archipelagic waters. The Major Defense Cooperation Partnership (MDCP) with the United States, signed in April 2026, is designed to address long-standing weaknesses in Indonesia's defense modernization strategy, offering greater access to US military education and training, and fostering interoperability. This cooperation extends to maritime systems, autonomous technologies, aircraft maintenance, and logistics, directly targeting identified capability shortfalls.

Defense spending trends are on an upward trajectory, with US Secretary of Defense Pete Hegseth commending Indonesia, among other Indo-Pacific nations, for increasing its defense budget and improving military capabilities at the Shangri-La Dialogue on May 30, 2026. This increased investment is seen as vital for maintaining regional stability and ensuring Indonesia's preparedness. While the MDCP offers significant gains in deterrence and security, it also presents a challenge for Indonesia to avoid over-dependence on foreign technology and to manage the financial commitment without undermining its strategic autonomy. The ongoing debate regarding the expanded role of the TNI in counter-terrorism also highlights internal discussions on force posture and deployment within the country.

Outlook and Forecast

Short-term trends (1-3 months): In the immediate future, Indonesia is expected to continue its robust defense modernization program, with further integration of the newly acquired French aircraft and ongoing progress in the Scorpene Evolved submarine project. Diplomatic efforts will likely remain highly active, particularly in balancing relations with major powers like the US and China, as demonstrated by the recent MDCP and President Prabowo's multi-alignment strategy. The push for the South China Sea Code of Conduct (CoC) will intensify, with Indonesia seeking to finalize the agreement by year-end. Cybersecurity initiatives, including conferences and crackdowns on cybercrime, will also continue to be a priority, reflecting the growing digital threat landscape.

Critical flashpoints and risk areas: The South China Sea, particularly around the Natuna Islands, remains a critical flashpoint due to persistent Chinese intrusions into Indonesia's EEZ and the broader geopolitical competition. The vulnerability of undersea fiber-optic cables in the Malacca and Makassar Straits presents a significant risk, especially given the increasing reliance on digital infrastructure and the potential for "The New Terror War" involving sabotage. Domestically, the debate surrounding the expanded role of the Indonesian Military (TNI) in counter-terrorism could lead to civil society concerns and potential internal friction if not managed carefully. Furthermore, Indonesia's economic nationalism, particularly its state control over commodity exports, could impact investor confidence and regional economic stability.

Indicators to monitor: Key indicators to monitor include the progress and eventual outcome of the South China Sea CoC negotiations, as this will significantly influence regional maritime security. The implementation of the MDCP with the US and its impact on Indonesia's military interoperability and strategic autonomy will be crucial. Observing Indonesia's defense spending trends and the diversification of its arms suppliers will provide insights into its long-term defense strategy. The effectiveness of cybersecurity measures against transnational cybercrime and state-sponsored attacks, particularly targeting critical infrastructure, will be vital. Finally, the domestic political discourse regarding the TNI's role in counter-terrorism and the balance between security and civil liberties will be an important internal dynamic to watch.

Strategic recommendations: Indonesia should continue to leverage its "multi-alignment" diplomatic strategy to maintain strategic autonomy while engaging with major powers, ensuring that partnerships serve its national interests without compromising its non-aligned stance. Strengthening the regulatory framework and physical security for critical undersea digital infrastructure in the Malacca and Makassar Straits is paramount to safeguard its digital sovereignty and economic stability. Enhancing regional cooperation, particularly within ASEAN, on maritime security and cybersecurity will be essential to address shared threats effectively. Domestically, a transparent and inclusive dialogue on the TNI's role in counter-terrorism is recommended to address civil society concerns and ensure that security measures uphold democratic principles.
